AS EASY AS FALLING OFF A HEMLOCK LOG.

Charles E. Patton Safe

Extensive Employer of Labor Who Never Had a Strike.

FARMER, CONTRACTOR, BUILDER.

Who, With His Ancestors, Has Done Much Towards Developing Pennsylvania's Natural Resources. A Man of Varied Experience and Undisputed Integrity.

The people of this Congressional District, comprising Clearfield, Centre, McKean and Cameron counties, are enthusiastic over the candidacy and dead sure of his election, having only a feeble opposition. The people living therein are substantial business men and farmers who go to the polls each year and vote for the men they believe in. They have long believed in Mr. Patton for he has been among them since his birth, has lived their life and has dealt with them in business. His worst enemy, if he had one sufficiently antagonistic to him to be characterized as "worst" could not even hint that Charles E. Patton was not an upright and honest man. He has the quality that wins admiration from the men who know him, and respect from all those with whom he comes in contact, both in a business way and socially.

While in Emporium last week, with the Republican Spellbinders, Mr. Patton met very many acquaintances and made many more. Our county is well satisfied with Mr. Patton as successor to our worthy Congressman, Mr. Barclay, who will, with his friends loyally support Mr. Patton.

Mr. Patton is of a family that was early settlers in Philadelphia and whose men took prominent part in the affairs of the State and Nation. His great-grandfather, General John Patton, came to this country from Ireland, 1765 and settled in Pennsylvania. He was Colonel of the Sixteenth Continental Regiment of Pennsylvania during the Revolutionary War and contributed 2,000 pounds sterling towards the support of the colonial forces. He moved to Centre county in 1789 and in 1791 he built Centre Furnace in partnership with Colonel Miles, the founder of Milesburg. He was a Major General of the Pennsylvania Militia at the time of his death in 1804. His son, Captain John Patton, was an officer in the United States Navy up to the time he resigned in 1810. He settled in Centre county and engaged in business at Tussey Furnace. In 1817 he moved to Tioga county, where he became the first Prothonotary of the county. In 1820 he moved to Lawrence Township and died in Curwensville in 1848. His son, General John Patton, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Tioga county. In 1852 he was a delegate to the Whig National Convention that nominated General Scott for the Presidency, and in 1860 he was a member of the Convention that made Abraham Lincoln the standard bearer of the Republican Party. In the same year he was elected a Congressman from the Twenty-fourth district and carried Clearfield county, which was then Democratic, two to one. In 1876 he was elected to Congress from the Twentieth District in the face of an adverse majority of 3,000.

Mr. Patton was born in Curwensville, where he now resides, July 5, 1859. He received his early education in the common schools of his native place and later attended the Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport. He started business as a dry goods merchant but later he branched out in various lines and won general success in business. He took farming as an avocation and was so successful that he was admitted to the Grange and became one of its most valued speakers. His experiments in farming have been of great importance. Mr Patton also dealt in coal and lumber, but his greatest business success has been in the engineering and contracting line. He started this business in a small way and it grew apace until now he is one of the largest contractors of his kind in the State. He employs a great many men and it is said of him that he has never had a strike nor a serious dispute with his employees. He is fair in his dealings with the men who work for him and besides being just and fair he takes a very active interest in their general welfare.

Mr. Patton aided largely in the construction and engineering of the West Branch Valley Railroad and has undertaken and carried to completion many other important works.

Mr. Patton is identified with many of the most important business ventures of the community in which he resides. He is prominent in banking circles, is a stockholder in the Curwensville Light and Power Company, the Avenue Theatre Company, of DuBois, Pa., and is connected with many other enterprises having to do with the public service.

Mr. Patton has always been an ardent Republican, following the footsteps of his father, who was one of the first members of that party. His election is considered a foregone conclusion.

Has Moved Restaurant.

The White Palace Restaurant, that has been located in the Johnson building, on Broad Street, for the past two years, has moved to the Spring property on Fourth Street. Mr. Anderson, the proprietor, has made many friends in Emporium during his short stay here and has worked up a good trade. The new location is fine and he will conduct an up-to-date eating house. Miss Margaret Kelly, of Cowdersport, who conducted the restaurant during the absence of Mr. Anderson through the summer months, is again spending a short time in town, assisting in arranging the new place.

Growing Worse.

Robt. C. Dodson, who has been very sick for several weeks, we regret to learn is worse, his ailment apparently puzzling the physicians.

Arm in Sling.

While unloading some vegetables at his home, last Saturday, O. J. Nangle fell from his wagon, fracturing his left wrist. Dr. H. S. Falk placed his arm in splints and now "Oney" is taking a little rest.

Bride and Groom Here.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. McInnes, of Corry, who were married on the 19th, visited in Emporium on Tuesday, guests of Mrs. Helen Taggart and family. We had the pleasure of meeting the happy couple. The bride is a daughter of our old friend Capt. J. F. Austin, Corry's popular postmaster; a very pleasant little lady.

Work to be Pushed.

Mr. E. D. White has returned from a business trip to Pittsburg and Buffalo, on business for the Iron Company. We understand work will be pushed to completion on the Furnace and that the whiste will "toot" ere many weeks. The furnace will be equal to the best in the country and then some.

Good Citizen Leaves.

We regret exceedingly to learn that Mr. C. R. Kline who has for many years been a resident of Beechwood, leaves to-day for Reading, his former home, where he has purchased a property and expects to pass his remaining years. We deeply deplore this fact, for C. R. Kline, an upright, genial gentleman, had so long been identified with our county that his departure will be keenly felt. We understand he has disposed of his interests in this county.

Gone to Binghamton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Loucks, of this place, where PRESS visitors yesterday just as they were about to take the flyer for Binghamton, N. Y., where they have purchased a grocery and fruit store. Their sister, Miss Emma, and brother, Mark, Jr., are now at Binghamton in charge of the business until they arrive. Their many Emporium friends with their fondest hopes may be realized.

Best Ever.

The Teacher's Institute is the most successful ever held in Cameron county. Miss Collins has certainly earned the hearty thanks of all, and she has that.

Handsome Team.

William Clark went to Olean, last week, and purchased a handsome team of horses, paying $500 for them.

Whom should we elect this fall?
Hon. Josiah Howard.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

HACKENBERG.

After months of terrible suffering, William Hackenberg passed away this (Wednesday) morning at two o'clock, surrounded by his faithful ones. When stricken he was taken to Buffalo, where painful operations were performed but of no avail. His death is a great loss to our town, where he has for so many years resided and been universally respected.

The family have the sympathy of the PRESS as well as the entire community. While searching for data to prepare an appropriate obituary for this issue, his pastor Rev. R. H. Bent, kindly handed us the following:

"Wm. Hackenberg was born 22nd April, 1836, at Fredburg, Pa. His parents removed to McEwensville when he was a child. Later he went into business with his father at White Pigeon, Mich., coming to the east the family lived at Watsontown, St. Marys and Driftwood. Mr. Hackenberg came to Emporium, with his wife and daughters, in 1877. He was to live here the remaining years of his life. Here his wife of blessed memory was to die, and here he was to marry the Christian lady that mourns his death to-day.

The life of Mr. Hackenberg is an open book; unassuming, courteous, pure and upright, an ornament to the community, blessing to the home.

His daughters call him blessed. The woman he loved weeps for a true lover, and the church of God has lost its officer and efficient helper."

The funeral will take place Friday afternoon at two o'clock, from the family residence on East Fifth Street.

INGRAM.

Another of our old land-marks was tenderly laid away in the Silent City, last Monday afternoon. MRS. ISABELLA F. INGRAM, aged 69 years, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Wright, at Oil City, last Friday, her remains arriving here on noon Flyer, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Wright, Lee Ingram, wife and son, Oil City; Mrs. Belle Averil, (daughter) Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Marie Minard-Pierce, Oil City. The remains were met at Broad Street Station by Rev. J. F. Anderson, pastor of M. E. Church, of which she had so many years been a faithful member, several relatives and a number of friends and taken to the church to await the last sad rites at two o'clock.

Although many of the friends of the family were not aware of the death of Mrs. Ingram, there was quite a goodly number of relatives and old neighbors in attendance at the church. Rev. J. F. Anderson, the pastor of the church, where she had attended so many years, spoke words of conso ation to the afflicted family. Interment was made in the family plot in Newton Cemetery.

Deceased leaves to mourn her death in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wright, of Oil City, (with whom she made her home for many years) one daughter and one son, and three sisters, the latter being Mrs. Lucreta Lockwood, Mrs. Amanda Wright, and Mrs. Matilda Newton, all of whom were in attendance at the funeral. Her husband, Capt. Jas. W. Ingram died a number of years ago. About one year ago, Mrs. Ingram had a slight stroke of paralysis but seemed to recover to a certain extent, yet when she visited here last she expressed a fear that she would be the next member of the family to answer the call. Born in Rich Valley and having resided here all her life until she moved to other places with her children, she had many friends who will be pained to learn of her death. We knew her since boyhood, and remember her as a bright, jolly pleasant lady, ever ready to assist and aid the sick and afflicted. The PRESS extends its sympathy to the bereaved one.

O'MALLEY.

Last Monday morning, a one year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter O'Malley, of East Fifth St., was buried from St. Mark's Church. This family has been sorely afflicted—first their home was destroyed by fire, now they lose their youngest child. Troubles never come singly.

The Champion Cook.

W. Murrill Swartz, after a nice visit at his comfortable residence, West Allegany Avenue, has returned to Lumber City, where he is head cook at the big lumber camp of Mr. Lyons on Potato Creek. His good wife has made so many impovements during his absence in camp that Mr. Swartz disliked to return to the woods, when he thought of the howling cold nights and then of his cozy home. Our genial good friend, whom we are pleased to meet, passed an hour at our sanctum when was here last. His good cheer does a fellow good.

Pleasant Visitors.

Dr. Ossian Lang, of New York, accompanied by Mr. R. Kuehne, our enterprising merchant, wer PRESS callers on Tuesday. Dr. Lang is guest of Mr. K. Kuehne and family while he is in Emporium, being among the Institute instructors. His able addresses delivered at each session are full of meat for thought and please his audiences. The Dr. is one of the most practical Institute workers in the country.

Will Take Bride.

Mr. Pompey Scott, one of Emporium's industrious colored boys, will next Monday take unto himself a wife in the person of Miss Anna Woodson, at Kane. The bridal party will arrive in Emporium on Monday when a reception will be given in their honor by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Scott, at their residence West Fifth street.

Glorious Record! 1860--Lincoln to Taft--1910.

LINCOLN I don't know much about the tariff, but I know this much: When we buy manufactured goods abroad we get the goods and the foreigner gets the money. When we buy the manufactured goods at home we get both the goods and the money.

GRANT The American system of locating manufacturing next to the plow and the pasture has produced a result noticeable by the intelligent portion of all commercial nations.

HARRISON The more work there is to do in this country the higher the wages that will be paid for doing it. That policy which secures the largest amount of work to be done at home is the policy which will secure to our laboring men steady employment at the best wages.

M'KINLEY The Republican Party stands for honest money and the chance to earn it by honest toil. Protection has vindicated itself. It cannot be helped by eulogy or hurt by defamation; it has worked its own demonstration and it presents in the sight of the world its matchless trophies.

ROOSEVELT This country has and this country needs better paid, better educated, better fed and better clothed workingmen, of a higher type than are to be found in any foreign country. It has and it needs a higher, more vigorous and more prosperous type of tillers of the soil than is possessed by any other country.

TAFT The present business system of the country rests on the protective tariff and any attempt to change it to a Free Trade basis will certainly lead to disaster. It is important that all Republicans who believe in the party principles as declared in the national platform of 1906 should give the candidates loyal and effective support. If this is done there will be no doubt of a Republican majority. The only alternative is a Democratic victory.

Gov. Stuart Heartily Endorses Tener, Tener Enters Suit Against His Traducer

TENER WORTHY TO WIN, SAYS GOV. STUART

Audience Cheers When the Chief Executive Indorses Nominee at Harrisburg.

HAS FAITH IN HIM

Knows the Man and Approves Him in Introducing Him at a Large Meeting.

MURPHY ANSWERS OPPOSITION

HARRISBURG, PA., OCT. 24.—Gov. Edwin Stuart to-night wrote his O. K., on the gubernatorial candidacy of John K. Tener. He did it before a great audience thar packed the Dauphin county court room and over-flowed into the streets. His utterances were received with tumultuous applause. A mighty cheer went up as he took the next governor by the hand and presented him to the applauding hundreds. The speech was brief, but to the point. Here it is:

"I appreciate as a very great honor the privilege of presiding over this meeting to-night in the city of Harrisburg. I came here four years ago and when I return to my home which will be very shortly, the most pleasant recollections I will carry with me of my stay in Harrisburg will be the kindness of all the people and their kindness to me while I have been a resident among you.

TENER UNDER NO OBLIGATIONS.

I am here to-night as a Republican in favor of the candidates of the Republican party. We have our nominee for Congress in this district here to-night and that is one of the many important things in the campaign; but I am here to-night to preside and introduce to you, among the other candidates, the candidate of the Republican party for governor of the state of Pennsylvania.

I had to-day a very frank and manly talk with the candidate and he assures me that he understands thoroughly the responsibilities of the great office for which he is a candidate and if he is elected to that office his only ambition will be to give an honorable administration in the interest and for the benefit of all the people of Pennsylvania.

He assures me that there are no other obligations to ask him or to make him do anything else—and the one thing he desires and the one thing he will do, is that on every question coming before him for his approval or action, he will use his judgement and be guided by what he thinks is for the best benefit of Pennsylvania and her people.

WILL DO WHAT HE PROMISES.

I am very glad to say that four yeas ago he was a very loyal friend and supporter of myself in that celebrated campaign and I take great pleasure in introducing to you the man who is the candidate of the Republican party and the man who I am satisfied will do what he promises you he will do if elected to that high and honorable office. I say that with all sincerity, and I now take great pleasure in introducing to you the Honorable John K. Tener, the candidate of the Republican party for governor of Pennsylvania."

When Gov. Stuart to-day read the manly statement of Mr. Tener in answer to his traducers, like thousands of other men throughout the commonwealth, he was satisfied that the Republican nominee has nothing to be ashamed of, nothing for which he need apologize. This morning the executive was one of the first men to call at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia to congratulate Mr. Tener. They talked for over an hour. At the close of the conversation, Gov. Stuart let it be known that he would to-night preside over the Harrisburg meeting and speak for the whole ticket. On Friday night he will make an address in Philadelphia from the same platform with Mr. Tener.

TENER'S STATEMENT HAS GOOD EFFECT.

The Tener statement is what the people wanted. They had a right to receive a specific denial of the charges. To-night every fair-minded man is satisfied. Any doubts he may have entertained have vanished, and he is jubilant and determined to vote and work for the Republican ticket. This knowledge could be gleaned to-day on the streets of Philadelphia and Harrisburg. The only topic of conversation was the Tener statement. It met every expectation. From now until November 8, it will be but a question of majority.

Harrisburg has witnessed some big political demonstrations, but it never saw a larger campaign opening than the one to-night.

"Ozone a Form of Oxygen.

Recently I added, at considerable expense, to my office equipment an apparatus for the generation of electricity and the administration of ozone. As is well known, oxygen is the life-giving principle, without which we could not exist beyond a few moments. Is is the "chief nourisher of life's feast." The air is composed of two parts oxygen and one part nitrogen and is a comparatively stable compound. Ozone has three parts oxygen and one part nitrogen and is unstable,—the extra part of oxygen ever reaching out to form a new affinity. Consequently when ozone is inhaled this extra element of oxygen enters the blood stream and combines with whatever non-oxidized materials it finds in the system. It thus re-vitalizes the entire human organism. Ozone, in its clear state, is too irritating for direct inhalation. In order to overcome this it is passed through a light volatile oil of the pinus group, such as contain pinene, cymene, camphene, eucalyptol, etc., forming a new compound variously designated by different authors as "Oxoline", "Oxyoline", "Terpene Peroxide" and Terpinized Oxygen", and which constitute an exceptionally agreeable and effective inhalent. Only an infinitesimal part of the extra oxygen element is consumed by this combination, the rest is left free in its non-irritating condition to enter blood stream. This is the modern treatment in all suitable cases of blood and nervous disease, where there is sub-oxidation or low vitality, and particularly in all chronic lung diseases and affections of the air passages.

BUILT UP COUNTRY

RECORD OF REPUBLICAN POLICY OF PROTECTION.

Splendid Prosperity Now Universal Throughout the Land the Direct Result of Principle of Fostering Home Market.

The following from a recent speech of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is well worth the reading:

"For half a century we have had Republican policies. When the party came into power there were few railways, few factories and little population in the west. The western country yielded grains and meats abundantly, but there were no markets beyond the requirements of new settlers. The people were intellignt and saw at one that home markets were needed. It cost too much to send crops to Europe. We wanted shops, forges, factories and we got them by encouraging them. A protective system was adopted that made a home market into which the outside world has wanted to enter ever since. The Republican policy then was to give protection equal to the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad.

"While we were building up our manufacturing system the public lands were being given to the people, which resulted in very cheap food for many years, not very profitable to the farmers. Building transportation lines to the Mississippi valley and beyond, opening mines and increasing manufactures resulted in complete settlement of the lands in the humid regions of our country and has greatly increased population in all vocations until home demand for food products is so great that prices are higher than they have been. The farmers during all these years have sustained the protective system because it maintained a home market for their products. They paid more for their factory goods, but they were made at home and the maker bought farm crops. Now it is proposed to let farm products come in free or at lower rates.

The farmers of the country had low prices for their crops, while free lands were to be had for taking up. The farmer endured high prices for factory goods while these industries were being developed and the west was being settled. It now costs him more than it did before. The land investment is greater and labor costs much more. Is he now to be put in the same class as farmers in new adjacent countries and sell his goods in an open market in competition with pioneers of other lands? We had experience between 1893 and 1897 along that line. The factory lost its customers because goods made cheaper abroad came in. The farmer lost his market because idle factory people could not buy.

"We have good times now, and have had since McKinley became 'the advance agent of prosperity.' Our country is very prosperous. The revision of the tariff has lost no man his job who wanted to work; no panic has followed."

The American Standard.

The Democratic idea that a tariff for revenue only will let prices sink to their natural level and the matter of wages take care of itself is un-Republican and un-American. This is a market worth all the markets in the world put together. The farmer has his products to sell and the laboring man has his one product—his labor—to sell. Both must be protected if we are to have prosperity. Keep the laboring man at work at good wages and he will have the money to buy the output of our farms and factories, and all classes of our people will rejoice and be glad. Former President Roosevelt the other day declared the Republican position in these words: "This country has and this country needs better paid, better educated, better fed and better clothed workingmen, of a higher type than are to be found in any foreign country. It has and it needs a higher, more vigorous and more prosperous type of tillers of the soil than is possessed by any other country."

Protection and not a tariff for revenue only is what makes such a condition possible and insures its continuance.

Republican Gains in Arkansas.

Let us for a moment shift our gaze from Maine to Arkansas. In that state the Democratic majority for governor is 19,000. The normal Democratic majority 60,000. Two years ago the majority for governor was 66,000. This shows a larger Republican landslide than the Democratic one in Maine, and the weather reports have for years shown that the prevailing wind is from the southwest.

The present business system of the country rests on the protective tariff and any attempt to change it to a free trade basis will certainly lead to disaster.—Wm. H. Taft.

Taft Always With Roosevelt.

The unanimity of sentiment always existing between Roosevelt and Taft was well shown in a story told at Kenyon by the secretary of agriculture, Mr. Wilson. When the Roosevelt cabinet discussed the presidential succession, the president said he was for Taft. Replying, Secretary Wilson said: "In many of your measures against corporations and in others you have not always had your entire cabinet with you, but you always had Taft."

PART OF WISDOM TO WAIT

Voters Should Consider Well Before Trusting Guidance of Country to the Democrats.

The Payne tariff act is not perfect, therefore turn the country over to the Democrats, is the Democratic cry. No tariff act ever enacted was perfect. No one ever claimed that the McKinley bill or the Dingley bill or the Payne bill was perfect. There is a difference, however, in the attitude of the two parties. Because the Payne law is not perfect, destroy protection and return, as Champ Clark says, to a revenue basis, is the Democratic attitude. Because the Payne law is not perfect, let us remove the imperfections but preserve protection, is the Republican attitude. The law itself provides for a tariff board whose duty it is to collect facts upon which to base wise legislation to that end. This was a point upon which there has been and is no disagreement among Republicans. Let us secure all the information possible as to cost here and abroad, and then if any rate is found unjust change it in the interest of our own people. That is the Republican position. It found expression in the debates in congress where the perplexities of tariff law preparation and the certainty of imperfections in the completed measure were fully recognized. It finds expression now in newspaper and speech and party platform. President Taft, former President Roosevelt, Senator Cummins of Iowa, Congressman Sereno E. Payne, Congressman Norris of Nebraska and hundreds of other Republican leaders all agree that it is the part of wisdom to await the report of the tariff board with definite information and evidence upon which to base an opinion and then to act upon any schedule which may be found to be wrong. They all recognize the certainty of disaster to the people of this nation that would follow Democratic supremacy and they all appeal to their Republican friends to stand together in this campaign and fight for Republican candidates and Republican principles.

The Farmer and Politics.

It has been stated by veteran politicians that the rural voter is better informed on the issues pending in a campaign, that he devotes greater and more painstaking thought to the things that must be settled at the polls than his city brother. That is why an overwhelming majority of the farmers of this country vote the Republican ticket. They know that under Democratic administration they have not been prosperous and that they have been under Republican administration. It is not necessary to remind any farmer of the dismal years of Democratic tariff legislation. This year there are more potent reasons than ever before for the farmers' support of the Republican party. No other class of persons in the United States is so prosperous as they are. Their prosperity since the return of the Republican party to power 13 years ago has been astounding. It is a matter of history that rural prosperity and Republican rule are coincident.

Get Together.

Let Republicans stop taking counsel of their Democratic opponents. Let them cease echoing the noisy and discordant defamation of Republican leaders by the Democratic press. Let them take counsel together as Republicans and take account of the splendid traditions and achievements of their great party. How long since has it been safe for a great army to be guided by the information and advice furnished by the enemy? In President Taft the Republican party has as wise and safe a leader as in him the country hast great-hearted, high-minded, public-spirited president. The declarations of the Connecticut Republican platform in praise of the president should be repeated in substance in every Republican platform yet to be adopted.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

More Than Actual Free Trade.

The threat of Mr. Champ Clark that if given power the Democrats will reduce the tariff to a revenue basis, is a worse threat than one of absolute free trade would be. To reduce the tariff to a revenue basis would mean the destruction of protection and the imposition of duties on articles the like of which we do not and cannot produce in the United States instead of on articles from abroad that come into competition with the products of our own farms and factories. Such a system would operate again as it always has operated—it would lower the wages of our workingmen and demoralize the market for everything the American farmer has to sell.

Both the serious panics since the Republican party was formed resulted directly and entirely from the election of a Democratic majority in congress. That is history.

McLean on Prosperity.

Mr. McLean's Cincinnati Enquirer in a leading editorial on Mr. George Gould's report on conditions in Europe, makes the following assertion as to conditions in the United States: "Mr. Gould returns to his own country at a time when its material interests are in a most thriving condition and are moving with profit to a greater number of people than have ever before been beneficiaries of industrial, commercial, agricultural and financial prosperity."

PROMINENT PEOPLE

CAREER OF ONE KENTUCKIAN

From the forests and the mountains of Kentucky to the position of secretary of state at Frankfort; from the state capitol to a grated cell; from the grated cell to the very shadow of the gallows; from the shadow of the gallows again to the grated cell; from the grated cell back to the forests and the mountains of Kentucky; from the forests and mountains to the halls of congress at Washington. This in brief is the history of Caleb Powers. He has been chosen as the Republican candidate for congress from his district, which is strongly Republican.

Seldom does a human life contain so much of struggle for advancement from humble beginnings, so much of tragedy and of pathos and so remarkable a rehabilitation in public honor. Caleb Powers will be a remarkable figure in Washington, because of the fact that for eight long years he was immured in a prison cell fighting to escape life imprisonment or execution for a crime of which half the people of Kentucky believe him guilty and the other half believe him absolutely innocent.

The minds of newspaper readers will instantly go back to that tragic day in January, 1900, when William Goebel was ruthlessly shot down from ambush as he was walking toward the state capitol at Frankfort. Goebel and W. S. Taylor, the former a Democrat and the latter a Republican, had been opposing candidates for governor and each claimed election. Taylor was given the certificate of election and in possession of the capitol and Caleb Powers was his secretary of state. As Goebel, whom the legislature on contest had declared to be elected, walked across the grounds leading to the capitol he was shot from the window of the office of the secretary of state. The murder created a national sensation and for many years the state of Kentucky was split into two bitter factions.

Following the tragedy there came a succession of trials in the course of which several men were found guilty of complicity in the murder and at least one—Henry E. Youtsey—is now serving a life sentence.

Caleb Powers was tried for murder and was sentenced to imprisonment for life. He appealed, and a second trial resulted in another conviction and a second sentence to life imprisonment. A third trial followed, and this time he was sentenced to be hanaged. On the fourth trial the jury disagreed, the majority being for acquittal.

Meantime eight years had rolled around and Powers was still in a prison cell at Georgetown. A petition containing the names of hundreds of thousands of persons both in Kentucky and elsewhere was presented to the governor and in 1908 Governor Willson granted Powers a full pardon.

GOTHAM'S QUEEN OF SILENCE

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, the New York society woman who fought single-handed to suppress unnecessary noise in the metropolis and who accomplished so much through her determination, is known as the "Queen of Silence." Mrs. Rice has long been a sworn enemy of noise. Her beautiful Venetian palace on Riverside drive is so located that, until she began her battle and won out her ears were continually ringing with the shrieks of the switch engines on the railroad tracks that line the river front and with the clamor of boat whistles. Along the East river are located two-thirds of the hospitals of the city and this thoughtful woman realized what extra suffering the sick must endure because of the nerve-racking clamor. She began to gather evidence to prove her point and with the aid of Columbia university students, who followed the boats and kept count, learned that there were about 5,000 unnecessary but deafening shrieks each night in the harbor. The harbor men were pleased to take umbrage at her interference and proceeded to make life miserable for her till she secured law on her side. During the night boats passing her home serenaded her with the most horrible whistles and focused their flashlights upon the house.

Nothing daunted, the plucky woman secured an order from the secretary of commerce and labor forbidding unnecessary whistling on the river. The harbor men persisting in their defiance, she had one man arrested, then another, until finally the racket was quieted. This was only the beginning, however. Mrs. Rice had gained the sympathy of all peace-loving citizens and the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noise was organized. City officials were interested and the fight continued against all superfluous racket. Peddlers, drivers, street organs, flat-wheeled cars and noisy youths all came in for a share of attention. Zones of quiet were drawn around hospitals and at least peace reigned as much as possible in a huge city where a certain amount of noise is unavoidable. The good work has been continued and has spread not only to other cities in this country, but has been taken up in European countries.

J. A. TAWNEY OF MINNESOTA

An insurgent victory that has attracted a good deal of attention throughout the country was the defeat in the primaries of Representative James A. Tawney, who was a canadidate for renomination in the first congressional district of Minnesota. Tawney is one of the most influential representatives in congress, is chairman of the committee on appropriations. A most determined fight was waged against his renomination and the insurgents had the support and advice of Roosevelt, Pinchot, James J. Heney and other exponents of progressive Republicanism.

In his early days Tawney was a blacksmith and machinist, learning the trades in Pennsylvania, where he was born in 1855, near the village of Gettysburg. Subsequently he removed to Winona, Minn., where he worked four years at his trade, at the same time studying law. In 1882 he was admitted to the bar, was later sent to the state senate, and in 1892 was elected to congress, in which he has since served.

Tawney is a dark, almost swarthy man, with a piercing black eye and a black mustache, now streaked with gray. When Cannon made him chairman of the committee on appropriations he did so because of the strength of character and firmness which Tawney had displayed. Often the speaker referred to him as the "man of iron," a not unfitting title. As chairman of the appropriations committee Tawney was regarded as the watchdog of the treasury, but he was one of the strongest stand-patters in the house, and hence the declaration of war upon him by the insurgents.

STARTED 'BEEF TRUST' QUIZ

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis of the United States district court in Chicago, who started the latest investigation of the "beef trust," is the same who imposed the $29,000,000 fine on the Standard Oil company a few years ago. His father served during the civil war in the regiment which was commanded by Judge Walter Q. Gresham, secretary of state under Cleveland, and was wounded in the battle of Kenesaw mountain. Hence the peculiar name of Judge Landis.

When Gresham was secretary of state Judge Landis, then a young Chicago lawyer, served as his private secretary. Afterward he returned to Chicago to practise his profession and was later elevated to the bench.

Of the ten indicted meat packers, charged by the federal grand jury with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, seven have given bonds in the total sum of $210,000 for their appearance for trial when the cases against them are called.

The fight thus begun against the meat packers promises to be one of life or death for the huge corporation, which, it has been charged repeatedly, controls the meat industry in this country.

Judge Landis is a young man with an old man's manner. He wears long hair, talks with a drawl and his language is picturesque.

A LITTLE TOO PRIMITIVE

Shower Bath Arrangement Something of a Shock to the Participant.

August Belmont, at a dinner in Saratoga, praised the seaside towns of New England.

"But some of them," he added, "are a little too primitive. "I remember a story about the primitive town of Rockford. Rockford had a rough bathing establishment, with a shower bath. You stood in your bathhouse and pulled a rope and a deluge of cool water descended from the ceiling.

"Well, a lady visitor stood one day in her bathhouse, ready for the shower. She pulled the rope and braced herself, but no shower followed. She gave the rope another tug, when the gruff voice of the sailor proprietor of the establishment sounded from aloft.

"'Stand a p'int more to the nor-east, mum,' it said, 'if ye want to get the full force.'

"And the horrified lady, looking up, saw the old sailor frowning impatiently through a hole in the ceiling and tilting a barrel of sea water for the shower.

Managing a Husband.

Men are like children; they want managing, although you must never let them dream that you think so. No child likes to be ordered about, no man will endure coercion. But managing! It is an art so subtle, so elusive, that few women understand even the rudiments of it. Sisters mine, let us reason together, says Woman's Life. In every human being there is a spark of the divine; it is yours to fan that spark into a flame—that is managing a man—it is to get the very best out of him there is to have, and not two women in ten can do it.

Do not think that there is anything unworthy in managing a man—to bring out the best is a high vocation. Only let us see to it that we are worthy of it. There are women who have made angels of men, but at the cost of their own divinity. There is room for more than one unselfish person in a family.

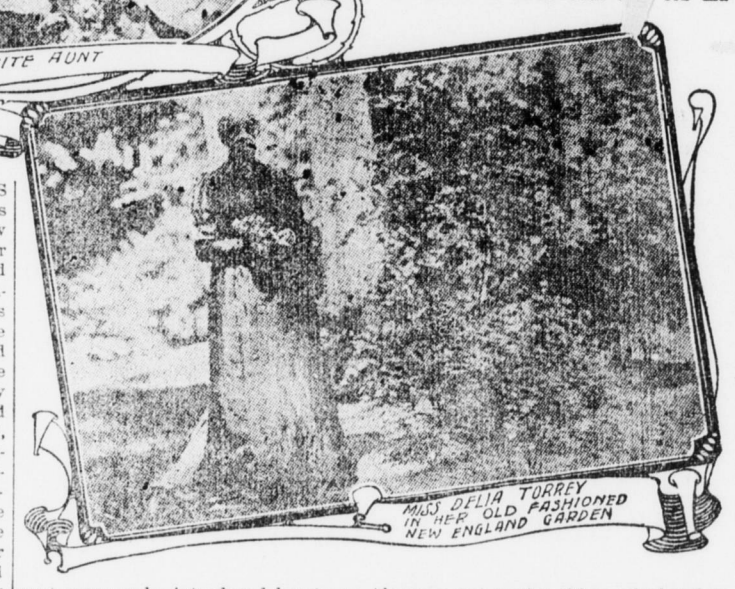
President Taft's Favorite Aunt

By WALDON FAWCETT



PRESIDENT TAFT'S favorite aunt, Miss Delia Torrey, is now in her eighty-fifth year and even if she did not have so distinguished a nephew as the president of the United States to laud her to the skies she would be well worthy of public interest and admiration for she is, for her age, one of the most remarkable women in America. For the reader to appreciate the unusual qualifications of President Taft's favorite relative it is only necessary to relate that she has attained the age of four score and five she walks without aid of crutch or cane, seldom wears glasses except when reading; keeps abreast of the times by regularly perusing the leading daily papers; travels hither and thither at will; has perfect hearing; and takes more than a perfunctory part in her housekeeping and in that cookery which President Taft has made famous in his speeches.

The chief magistrate does not let a year go by without making one or more visits to Aunt Delia in her New England home and he has publicly confessed that one especial lure is found in the apple pies dear to his memory ever since boyhood and which he maintains nobody makes with such wizardy as Aunt Delia. In return for her hospitality the president and his family entertain Aunt Delia several times each year, both at the White House at Washington and at the president's vacation home on the north shore of Massachusetts Bay. The president has made Aunt Delia a convert to the joys of motoring, and this past summer he introduced her to another new experience, a cruise on the presidential yacht Sylph which was her first voyage on a boat of any kind in all her long life.

The fondness of President Taft for Miss Torrey and her stately home at Millbury, Mass., is the more readily understood when it is explained that the old homestead in the little village in central Massachusetts,—the house that has been home to Miss Torrey ever since she was six years of age,—was the boyhood home of William H. Taft and his brothers. Mrs. Taft, mother of the president, always found the climate of Cincinnati very trying in summer and accordingly it became her custom to take the children and spend the entire heated term each year with her only sister in the homestead at Millbury. No wonder that "Bill" Taft grew up with many close friends here, dating from the days when he played "first base" on the ball team; and with strong associations for the old house and vivid memories of the matchless cookery of Aunt Delia,—particularly in the matter of apple pies. Furthermore, after the death of Judge Taft his widow made her home until her death with Aunt Delia, and hither came William H. Taft at frequent intervals to visit his mother and his aunt.

The home of Aunt Delia is located on the main street of the little village and within sight of the passengers on the trolley cars bound for Worcester, some half-hour's ride distant. The house is large, with a portico in front supported by columns rising to the second floor and it appears immaculate in the coat of white paint contrasted with the green shutters which one comes to look upon as inevitable in New England. The house is surrounded by flower gardens and conspicuous among the posies is a gorgeous Killarney rose which was transplanted from the White House at Washington for Aunt Delia and which is her especial pride. The interior of the house is filled with rare old mahogany and quaint china calculated to provoke envy in the breast of any collector of antiques. There, too, is the old family Bible with its interesting chronicle of the various members of the clan for many generations past.

In addition to her other accomplishments Aunt Delia writes a clear legible hand and she has plenty of practise in penmanship for she receives a heavy volume of mail now that her nephew's praise has made her known by reputation to the great American public. Many of the letters that come to Miss Torrey contain requests for her favorite recipes, particularly those that embody her formulas for the vaunted apple pies. Aunt Delia declares that some of the recipes that have been attributed to her had no such origin, but she smiles indulgently at the disposition to make her an oracle for Yankee housewives who would reach the masculine heart through the stomach.

STORY OF SHIRTS

"What is the best war speech you ever made in your life?" said a friend the other day to Capt. Joe Waters.

"I never made but one good war speech in my life," he replied. "And that was when I kissed the girls goodby and left with my company for the camp of instruction. Find friends gave me this and that with their farewells, and when the train pulled out, as it whirled around the bend and the last waving handkerchief vanished from sight, we sat down and began making an inventory of our effects. A white satin lined pincushion, with the name of the giver inside; a model housewife, with two kinds of scissors, thimble, needle, shirt and pants buttons, hooks and eyes, cotton tapes, recipes for stomach ache and cholera morbus, crochet needles, rheumatism cure, and a full pound and one-half of black patent thread in hanks—bless their dear souls! Another 'housewife,' just like the first; a thimble, six pairs of socks, four woolen scarfs; another 'housewife,—another—and another, a Bible, seven towels and a can of jelly, a dozen filagree worked napkins and another can of jelly.

"My recollection is that all of the other boys were served in the same manner, and got about the same amount of these contraptions. While it may be that my memory is faulty, yet for the life of me I cannot tell what became of all those fixin's. But I remember certainly and well that four months had not passed until Ed Case of Company A emitted in the black of the night a cry that enveloped the mountains of Kentucky: 'Who in the h—— has got a thread?' The echo danced around from one rock to another and the answer always was: 'Dam fino.'

"We had one fellow named Bill Whiting. His wife presented him with the finest woolen shirt I ever saw. It was all hemstitched over with fancy colored tapes and laces, with mottoes worked in gold and silver, and such legends as 'The Friends at Home,' 'For Country,' 'From Your Wife.' When he put that shirt on—at Louisville, I think it was—he looked for all the world like a circus getting off the cars. His wife evidently had no idea of war. She imagined her husband would put up over night at the best hotels, and would have the benefit of wash lists and laundries. But that shirt was born to no such destiny. It was never to know a washwoman, or to be soused into a tub.

"And speaking of shirts, some fair and patriotic girl who was a member of a Dorcas society, made a shirt to be sent to a soldier; it was evidently intended for a man at least a foot shorter than I am, and, therefore, you know, he wouldn't be very tall. Upon it was pinned a tab, asking the recipient, whoever he might be, to acknowledge the receipt of the garment. It was unfortunately apportioned to a man who went by the soubriquet of 'Chimbley Dan;' he was about seven feet two inches in altitude, and built after the pattern of a continued story that runs for about so many consecutive weeks and then is announced to be 'continued in our next.' Chimbley Dan tried on the shirt and thought a long time, and finally concluded that he would answer in rhyme; and this is what he had the cheek of a government to write to her:

"Like a man without a wife,
Like a ship without a sail,
The oddest thing I know in life,
Is a shirt without—a proper length."

North Carolina Rattlers

The state museum now contains the largest rattlesnake, mounted, in any collection in the world. It may not be generally known, but it is true that in North Carolina the largest rattlers are found. The United States snake experts are the authority for this statement.

It must be borne in mind that the skin of a snake can be greatly stretched, so that after it has been removed it can be pulled out in any way to make the snake appear longer or of greater girth. In this case the taxidermist, Tom Addicks, made a perfect plaster cast and on this mounted the skin, which was made to fit precisely and to conform to every measurement.

This snake is 6 feet 11 inches in length, 11 inches in girth and weighed 7 pounds 10 ounces. It has 12 rattles. The width of its body, lying flat, is 4¼ inches. The length of tail from vent to rattles, but not including the latter, is only 4¼ inches. The head is 3½ inches wide. The snake is of the diamond variety. It is mounted nearly at full length. It was killed at Havelock, near Lake Ellis, by J. J. Ballard, with one blow on the head with a small stick, so that not even the skin was broken. He took this care so as to secure for the museum in perfect condition a snake which was the largest he had ever seen.

Near the same place Mr. Addicks, Herbert Brimley and Mr. Brimley's two little sons had an exciting and peculiar experience with another rattlesnake, and a rather large specimen too. As they were walking Mr. Brimley stepped over the snake while his son Arthur saw it and stopped. The snake was in coil but was as gentle as the traditional lamb. A noose was put over his head. He did not rattle, but was lifted and carried along. Not until his hearer struck a bush with him did this serpent turn in the alarm.

The bite of the rattler does not appear to affect other snakes. In the state museum a rattler bit a king snake so deep that blood flowed quite freely but there was no further damage. This rattler bit another rattler but with no result.—Raleigh Correspondence Forest and Stream.

Chafing Dish Dishes.

As the bracing and cool days of autumn come upon us, the chafing dish which has been having its vacation time, is welcomed with a real delight. There are so many appetizing dishes which are only prepared and served in perfection from the chafing dish.

One of the most charming things about a chafing dish is the seeing a dish made before the eyes. For a beginner it is best to start with something simple, like fried bacon or liver and bacon. Rub the blazer with onion and put in the bacon. When crisp, lay in thin slices of liver which have been rolled in flour. Serve each piece of liver with a slice of bacon.

Curried Salmon.—Chop one small onion and brown in the blazer in a tablespoonful of olive oil, mix together a tablespoonful of flour and a teaspoonful of curry powder, add to the onion, stir and cook until bubbling, then add three-fourths of a cup of hot water, a teaspoonful of salt, the juice of half a lemon and the salmon.

Sardines on toast are another simple and tasty dish. Heat the sardines and put on pieces of toast cut the size and shape of a lady finger. Serve with chopped onion put on lettuce leaves arranged around a platter.

A Savory Rechauffe.—Stir together a tablespoonful of jelly, apple, currant or grape and two tablespoonfuls of butter in the blazer until melted. Lay in slices of rare roast beef or cold mutton or lamb; season with salt and pepper, turn often and serve.

Creamed Lobster.—Chop the flesh of a medium-sized lobster. Beat the yolks of two eggs and mix with two tablespoonfuls of cream. Season with salt, onion juice, pepper and nutmeg. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in the chafing dish. When hot add the lobster meat; when hot add the seasonings. Serve on buttered toast.

Curried Eggs.—Take six hard-boiled eggs, slice crosswise into four thick slices. Brown a small onion in a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour, a teaspoonful of curry powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and a cupful of stock; cook until smooth, then add two tablespoonfuls of cream and the sliced eggs.

RECIPE for Home Comfort.—Take of thought of self one part, two parts of thought for family; equal parts of common sense and broad intelligence, a large medium of the sense of the fitness of things; a heaping measure of living above what your neighbors think of you; twice the quantity of keeping within your income; a sprinkling of what tends to refinement and esthetic beauty stirred thick with Christian principles of the true hand and set to use.

—Anna C. Powers.

Dusting.

Dust, like the poor, is always with us, and the process of dusting consumes a large part of the time of the house wife. Many thrifty workers carry a small dust cloth in the pocket, then when going upstairs dust the treads and banisters; on coming down dust the railing.

Now that we are beginning to realize that dust contains living germs, many of them disease germs, which are only waiting for favorable conditions to develop, we should use more care in the removal of dust. Brushing with a feather duster only stirs up the dust, to be taken into the lungs through the air we breathe.

An amusing story is told by Max O'Rell: When visiting in this country, his hostess and he came into a room where a maid was wielding a duster with more vigor than judgment, and replied, when asked what she was doing: "Why, I'm dusting." Her mistress requested her to "please undust."

Much using of the broom is often unnecessary, to pick up loose threads and brush up footmarks takes less time than ordinary sweeping, which leaves the dusting still to be done. Dusting is an art. For plain surfaces a soft, absorbent cloth, slightly damp is the best, using a brush and pointed stick to reach corners and cracks.

The cloth should be shaken and well washed after using. The manufactured dust cloth wihch contains an oil and holds the dust is quite a popular one at present.

"Possibly we shall some day again build our houses or dwelling places so simple and elemental in character that they will fit into the nooks of the hills or along the banks of streams or by the edges of the woods without disturbing the harmony of the landscape or the songs of the birds."—Edward Carpenter.

The sensible furniture of today is without grooves and carving is easily dusted. The less upholstered furniture the better and more sanitary is our home. Chairs may be as comfortable of rattan or wood with movable cushions and the hominess for which we strive is not lost, for a cushion will add a spot of color and make a restful seat at the same time.

Somebody said, "Woman's work is never done." Anything that emancipates her from this form of slavery is hailed with joy. This is the reason for the constantly increasing popularity of "Easy Task Soap," the hard, white, pure laundry soap, that does half the work of wash-day by itself. Add to this the fact that it positively does not rot or streak the clothes, that it launders laces, linens, flannels, silks, bedding, table cloths and all fabrics perfectly, and you will understand why it should be in your house right away.

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark It as Most Suitable Spot for Dedication of Great Work.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contesting for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time in traveling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors.

Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical Point" for this Panama Exposition, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:—

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

Within a radius of 1,000 miles from New Orleans, there are 65,000,000. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 6,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of just 1,000,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 792 miles,—to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 75 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

This is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December.

Many of our readers will wish to visit this World's Panama Exposition, and if held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip than could go to San Francisco. Therefore, we urge our readers to write to the two senators from this State and the congressman from this district, requesting them to support New Orleans in the contest.

The Retort Courteous.

"Now," said the suffragette orator, sweeping the audience with her eagle eye, "I see Mr. Dobbs sitting down there in the third row—a man who has condescended to come here tonight and listen to our arguments. He has heard what I have had to say, and I think we should like to hear from him, and get a man's view of our cause. Mr. Dobbs, tell us what you think of the suffragettes."

"Oh, I c-c-couldn't, m-m-ma'am," stammered Dobbs. "I rur-really c-couldn't. Thu-there are l-l-lul-ladies pup-present."—Harper's Weekly.

He Came by It Honestly.

"Lend me your pencil, Johnny." The small boy handed it over and teacher continued to correct the exercises of the class. When she finished she suffered a sudden lapse of memory and laid the pencil away in her desk. As she stood up to excuse the class she encountered the scornful gaze of Johnny's eyes. Rising in his seat he fixed her with an accusing forefinger and uttered the single word "Graft!"

Johnny's father writes for a current magazine.

Canting Hypocrisy.

The spectacle of canting hypocricy, false pretense of advocacy of reform and wild demagogic appeal to the mob which is at the present time being presented by the campaign of William H. Berry, the candidate for Governor of the Flinn VanValkenburg-Gang-Bryan-Democracy-Keystone Party, is one to set the honest and sincere voter to thinking, says the Philadelphia Star.

Berry poses as a "reformer" and shouts that about all others but himself and his supporters are under suspicion and should be jailed. The record shows however, that when he was State Treasurer and custodian of the State's money he had pet depositories for State funds. One of these was the Harrisburg Trust Co.

The Harrisburg Trust Co. financed a $50,000 bond issue of the Fields Brick Co., of Chester, Pa., of which Berry was the principal owner. This it did after the principal bank in Chester had loaned the Fields Brick Co. $16,000 and had refused to advance any more.

It has been asserted, too, and we have not seen it denied, that the Harrisburg Trust Co., which furnished the $500,000 bond required of Berry by the State when he became State Treasurer, did so virtually free of charge.

When Berry took office as State Treasurer, the amount of State funds on deposit in the Harrisburg Trust Co., on April 30, 1906, was $385,000. Month by month thereafter the State Funds deposited in the Harrisburg Trust Co. increased, until, on Sept. 30, 1906, they were $718,126, at about which figure they remained during the entire term of Berry's tenure as State Treasurer, being reduced when his successor took office.

Another pet depository of State funds under the Berry regime was the Farmers' Deposit Bank of Pittsburg.

When Berry borrowed $15,000 for one of his Chester concerns from Col. James M. Guffey, the loan was made by putting the note made by Berry indorsed by Guffey, through this bank.

The loan was not paid and the Farmers' last summer, sold the 2,700 shares of stock Berry had given it as a collateral for all it would bring under the hammer—$700, leaving a balance due the bank of $14,300, with $730 unpaid interest.

Berry's ingratitude to Guffey, his hypocrisy in posing as fighting the liquor interests when he had made such arrangements that at the Allentown Democratic Convention five saloon delegates and one collector for a brewery swung the entire Lackawanna county delegation for Berry, and the list of those who supported Berry there reveals the names of others connected with the liquor interests.

His demagogic appeals to the mob, his demands that the men be burned at the stake, and others who opposed him at Allentown jailed, as well as his undignified and frothy sensational utterances on the stump, are of too recent occurrence to need comment.

Emporium People Has to Bow to the Enevitable—Scores of Citizens Prove it,

Mrs. John Summerson, W. Sixth St., Emporium, Pa., says: "My back ached most of the time and there was a soreness across my kidneys. Rheumatic pains darted through my limbs and in the morning when I got up, I felt tired and languid. Hearing that Doan's Kidney Pills were an excellent preparation for complaints of this kind, I procured a supply at Taggart's Drug Store. The remedies I had previously taken had not helped me, but Doan's Kidney Pills brought relief at once. I now feel much stronger and better in every way."

The above statement was given in Oct. 1907 and on Dec. 14, 1909, Mrs. Summerson confirmed it in detail.

SMALL COUNTY IS WELL REPRESENTED AT CAPITAL.

Josiah Howard Legislator Since 1905, Will Be Re-Elected in Cameron.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Cameron the smallest county in population in Pennsylvania, is represented by one of the ablest men in the Legislature. Josiah Howard, of Emporium, entered the House in 1905 and at the session of 1907 he was given the important chairmanship of the committee of ways and means. In 1909 he was the head of the education committee, the body which had charge of the school code.

In the primaries of this spring no representative Republican of Cameron county was willing to enter the field against Mr. Howard. It was generally agreed that he had so ably represented his constituents in the two sessions that he should not be opposed He have great influence in the next House. Mr. Howard is a man of big business affairs and knows not only the needs of his constituents, but is well informed concerning his state.

Mr. Howard was born in Williamsport on January 3, 1961. He was educated in the public schools, graduating in 1880. In 1887, he removed to Emporium and entered the lumber business as a member of C. B. Howard Company, a corperation which has large interests in Cameron county. Mr. Howard is also interested in the big powder mills of Cameron county, having recently been selected as chairman of executive board of the powder company. His concern has a contract to supply all of the dynamite used in the construction of the Panama canal. Mr. Howard was elected burgess of Emporium in 1902 and first entered the House in 1905.

What Democrats Think of Tener's Assailant.

From the Doylestown Democrat.

The North American is now so thoroughly discredited that no well informed person is deceived by its censure. Its yellow capers are the laughing stock of newspaper readers within the limited area in which it circulates. It is a joke, and a very small one too. People once laughed with the North American; but now they laugh at it. It has long been on the toboggan slide of popularity and its stronger and better newspaper rivals in the city have crowded it into a very small corner, where a coterie of congenial spirits still feel and gloat over its morbid abuse. Even its sensation-sated admirers no longer take it seriously and it does not have the poor satisfaction of wielding any influence with them.

The North American is an outcast from American journalism. Its opinions are seldom or never quoted by other journals of good standing. Its news is colored to suit its own distorted and abnormal views of society and politics. Writers in its employ must sink their individuality, character and honor as newspaper men and drag themselves without protest through its yellow mire or get out, and every self-respecting newspaper man gets out. A man who stays two months on its staff of writers is considered an old man in its employ. Usually about two weeks of it is enough. The public will draw their own conclusion about the value of political views emanating from that sort of a newspaper hades.

Glorying in character assassination, it is impotent to assassinate, because its vocation as an assassin is too well advertised. Politically it is a nonentity. It has no policy and little influence. If it represents anybody politically, it is a set of discredited and dislodged Republican leaders, who have long wanted to control Pennsylvania politics, but cannot. Soured by its own political feebleness and chafing under defeat of whoever or whatever it has ever advocated, its aim is now to create political anarchy. Again it will fail because its mission as a disturber is too well known. The North American has never had a word of commendation for a Democrat or a Democratic policy. In this respect the Democratic party is fortunate, for a party's policy or candidates could receive no better endorsement than the North American's active opposition.

Tener and the Wage Earner.

In a recent address to a gathering of miners Representative Tener discussed the attitude of the Republican Party in this State towards labor. He referred to the many wholesome laws for the advancement of the wage earner enacted by that party and continued:—

"Of this record we are justly proud, and we point to our action in the past as a guarantee of our intentions in the future. We realize that the development of our industries has brought with it new problems, new dangers and altogether complex conditions that demand and deserve consideration and treatment by the law-making and law-administering powers of our Commonwealth."

Mr. Tener then outlined some of the recommendations he will submit to the Legislature for the enactment of further legislation in the interest of laboring men and women. He referred especially to measures for the protection of the life and health of those who toil in the mines and factories and emphasized the importance of the employers' liability law, whose operation, he said, should be broadened in justice to the wage earner.

It will be to the interest of every working man in Pennsylvania to vote the Republican ticket this year. A better friend of labor than John K. Tener has never been presented to the people as a candidate for Governor. His record as a citizen and as a public man in every sense confirms this statement. The pledge he made the wage earners to support their cause to the measure of his ability and influence was not a campaign platitude. He meant every word he uttered. With John K. Tener as Governor labor will be assured of a "square deal" at Harrisburg

The election of Mr. Tener and the other candidates on the State ticket is not the only phase of the campaign with which labor is concerned. On November 8th this State will elect a Legislature and thirty-two members of Congress. The Legislature will name a United States Senator. That Senator should be a Republican. Each of the thirty-two men Pennsylvania will send to the House at Washington should be a Republican. The welfare of labor demands this. If the Democratic party comes into power it will pass a Democratic tariff bill. Every wage earner knows what that will mean because he recalls what the enactment of the last Democratic tariff bill meant. There is but one way for the laboring man to protect himself against destructive Democratic tariff revision. He must vote the Republican ticket. A vote for the Keystone ticket will be a vote for a Bryan Democrat for Governor. It will be a vote for Democratic candidates for the Legislature, who, if elected, will vote for a Democrat for United States Senator. It will be a vote for Democratic candidates for Congress, who, if elected, will vote to substitute free trade for the protective tariff system. Can any working man in this State afford to vote the Keystone ticket?

To the Voters of Cameron County

I am a candidate for the Legislature and respectfully solicit your votes for me at the coming election, Tuesday, Nov. 8, 1910.

I have always stood for

Schools and Churches,
Play Grounds and Factories,
Farms and Homes.

I have lived here 23 years and you all know me and that I have used my best efforts for the permane nt advancement ofthe interests of the whole county.

Our towns and county are growing and we are getting better schools, better churches and more factories. We are on the FRONT LINE in many things and I will try to do my share to keep us there, and to progress as fast as opportunity and means permit us. We firmly believe the county is only beginning to open up its coal operations and brick clays and that they hold a large and sure future for us all.

Trusting to merit your support and assuring you of my appreciation and best endeavor.

Yours very truly,

JOSIAH HOWARD,

Emporium, Pa., Oct. 17, 1910.

The Popular Windsor.

The many Cameron county patrons of the Windsor Hotel, Philadelphia, will be pleased to learn that this long, established and popular hotel, which has been conducted for so many years by the Windsor Real Estate Company, has been leased for a period of ten years by Waldo T. Brubaker, who for the past five years has managed the hotel for the owners. Before coming to the Windsor, Mr. Brubaker was for some years connected with the Shelburne, of Atlantic city.

Mr. Brubaker has applied for a charter for the Philadelphia Windsor Hotel Company, which will assume the lease and conduct the business. Associated with him in the new concern and active in the conduct of the business will be Frank J. Zimmerman, for the past eighteen years in charge of Bassett Ice Cream Company's restaurant at 504. Market Street; John R. Keegan, formerly manager at the Rudolf, Atlantic City, and at present Chief clerk at the Windsor; Clarence W. Walsh and Joseph F. Donovan. The last two named are with Mr. Brubaker the incorporators of the new company.

While one of the greatest assets of the Windsor is undoubtedly its location, situated as it is on Filbert Street, midway between Broad Street Station and the Reading Terminal and in the heart of the Theatre and shopping districts, the new company plans to add to the attractiveness of the house by several changes and improvements, among which are the addition of about fifty new suites with private baths, and the placing of the dining rooms and kitchens under the personal supervision and direction of Mr. Frank J. Zimmerman, one of the best known and most competent stewards in Philadelphia. Mr. Zimmerman plans several extensive changes in the dining room, and intends to make a specialty of serving a business men's lunch at noon time. The house will be conducted, as formerly, on both the American and European Plans.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey, that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story. It developed that Dr. Walker and Louise were to be married. A prowler was heard in the house. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Louise said she had heard a knock at the door and answered it. Something brushed past her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead. A slip was found in his pocket bearing the name "Lucien Wallace, 14 Elm street, Richfield."

"Certain."

"In what part?"

"In the east wing."

"Can you tell me when these intrusions occurred, and what the purpose seemed to be? Was it robbery?"

"No," I said decidedly. "As to time, once on Friday night a week ago, again the following night, when Arnold Armstrong was murdered, and again last Friday night."

The doctor looked serious. He seemed to be debating some question in his mind, and to reach a decision.

"Miss Innes," he said, "I am in a peculiar position; I understand your attitude, of course; but—do you think you are wise? Ever since you have have come here there have been hostile demonstrations against you and your family. I'm not a croaker, but—take a warning. Leave before anything occurs that will cause you a lifelong regret."

"I am willing to take the responsibility," I said coldly.

I think he gave me up then as a poor proposition. He asked to be shown where Arnold Armstrong's body had been found, and I took him there. He scrutinized the whole place carefully, examining the stairs and the lock. When he had taken a formal farewell I was confident of one thing. Dr. Walker would do anything he could to get me away from Sunnyside.

CHAPTER XXI.

Fourteen Elm Street.

It was Monday evening when we found the body of poor Thomas. Monday night had been uneventful; things were quiet at the house and the peculiar circumstances of the old man's death had been carefully kept from the servants. Rosie took charge of the dining room and pantry, in the absence of a butler, and, except for the warning of the Casanova doctor, everything breathed of peace.

Affairs at the Traders' bank were progressing slowly. The failure had hit small stock-holders very hard, the minister of the little Methodist chapel in Casanova among them. He had received as a legacy from an uncle a few shares of stock in the Traders' bank, and now his joy was turned to bitterness; he had to sacrifice everything he had in the world, and his feeling against Paul Armstrong, dead, as he was, must have been bitter in the extreme. He was asked to officiate at the simple services when the dead banker's body was interred in Casanova churchyard, but the good man providentially took cold, and a substitute was called in.

A few days after the services he called to see me, a kind-faced little man, in a very bad frock-coat and laundered tie. I think he was uncertain as to my connection with the Armstrong family, and dubious whether I considered Mr. Armstrong's taking away a matter for condolence or congratulation. He was not long in doubt.

I liked the little man. He had known Thomas well, and had promised to officiate at the services in the rickety African Zion church. He told me more of himself than he knew, and before he left I astonished him—and myself, I admit—by promising a new carpet for his church. He was much affected, and I gathered that he had yearned over his rugged chapel as a mother over a half-clothed child.

"You are laying up treasures, Miss Innes," he said brokenly, "where neither moth nor rust corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal."

I sent him home in the car, with a bunch of hothouse roses for his wife, and he was quite overwhelmed. As for me, I had a generous glow that was cheap at the price of a church carpet. I received less gratification—and less gratitude—when I presented the new silver communion set to St. Barnabas.

I had a great many things to think about in those days. I made a list of questions and possible answers, but I seemed only to be working around in a circle. I always ended where I began. The list was something like this:

Who had entered the house the night before the murder?

Thomas claimed it was Mr. Bailey, whom he had seen on the foot-path, and who owned the pearl cuff-link.

Why did Arnold Armstrong come back after he had left the house the night he was killed?

No answer. Was it on the mission Louise had mentioned?

Who admitted him?

Gertrude said she had locked the east entry. There was no key on the dead man or in the door. He must have been admitted from within.

Who had been locked in the clothes chute?

Some one unfamiliar with the house, evidently. Only two people missing from the household, Rosie and Gertrude. Rosie had been at the lodge. Therefore—but was it Gertrude? Might it not have been the mysterious intruder again?

Who had accosted Rosie on the drive?

Again—perhaps the nightly visitor. It seemed more likely some one who suspected a secret at the lodge. Was Louise under surveillance?

Who had passed Louise on the circular staircase?

Could it have been Thomas? The key to the east entry made this a possibility. But why was he there, if it were indeed he?

Who had made the hole in the trunk-room wall?

It was not vandalism. It had been done quietly, and with deliberate purpose. If I had only known how to read the purpose of that gaping aperture what I might have saved in anxiety and mental strain!

Why had Louise left her people and come home to hide at the lodge?

There was no answer, as yet, to this, or to the next questions.

He Scrutinized the Whole Place Carefully.

Why did both she and Dr. Walker warn us away from the house?

Who was Lucien Wallace?

What did Thomas see in the shadows the night he died?

What was the meaning of the subtle change in Gertrude?

Was Jack Bailey an accomplice or a victim in the looting of the Traders' bank?

What all-powerful reason made Louise determine to marry Dr. Walker?

The examiners were still working on the books of the Traders' bank, and it was probable that several weeks would elapse before everything was cleared up. The firm of expert accountants who had examined the books some two months before testified that every bond, every piece of valuable paper, was there at that time. It had been shortly after their examination that the president, who had been in bad health, had gone to California. Mr. Bailey was still ill at the Knickerbocker, and in this, as in other ways, Gertrude's conduct puzzled me. She seemed indifferent, refused to discuss matters pertaining to the bank, and never, to my knowledge, either wrote to him or went to see him. Gradually I came to the conclusion that Gertrude, with the rest of the world, believed her lover guilty, and—although I believed it myself, for that matter—I was irritated by her indifference. Girls in my day did not meekly accept the public's verdict as to the man they loved.

But presently something occurred that made me think that under Gertrude's surface calm there was a seething flood of emotions.

Tuesday morning the detective made a careful search of the grounds, but he found nothing. In the afternoon he disappeared, and it was late that night when he came home. He said he would have to go back to the city the following day, and arranged with Halsey and Alex to guard the house.

Liddy came to me on Wednesday morning with her black silk apron held up like a bag and her eyes big with virtuous wrath. It was the day of Thomas' funeral in the village, and Alex and I were in the conservatory cutting flowers for the old man's casket. Liddy is never so happy as when she is making herself wretched, and now her mouth drooped while her eyes were triumphant.

"I always said there were plenty of things going on here, right under our noses, that we couldn't see," she said, holding out her apron.

"I don't see with my nose," I remarked. "What have you got there?"

Liddy pushed aside a half dozen geranium pots, and in the space thus cleared she dumped the contents of her apron—a handful of tiny bits of paper. Alex had stepped back, but I saw him watching her curiously.

"Wait a moment, Liddy," I said. "You have been going through the library paper-basket again!"

Liddy was arranging her bits of paper with the skill of long practice and paid no attention.

"Did it ever occur to you," I went on, putting my hand over the scraps, "that when people tear up their correspondence it is for the express purpose of keeping it from being read?"

"If they wasn't ashamed of it they wouldn't take so much trouble, Miss Rachel," Liddy said oracularly. "More than that, with things happening every day, I consider it my duty. If you don't read and act on this, I shall give it to that Jamieson, and I'll venture he'll not go back to the city to-day."

That decided me. If the scraps had anything to do with the mystery ordinary conventions had no value. So Liddy arranged the scraps, like working out one of the puzzle-pictures children play with, and she did it with much the same eagerness. When it was finished she stepped aside while I read it.

"Wednesday night, nine o'clock. Bridge," I read aloud. Then, aware of Alex's stare, I turned on Liddy.

"Some one is to play bridge tonight at nine o'clock," I said. "Is that your business, or mine?"

Liddy was aggrieved. She was about to reply when I scooped up the pieces and left the conservatory.

"Now then," I said, when we got outside, "will you tell me why you choose to take Alex into your confidence? He's no fool. Do you suppose he thinks any one in this house is going to play bridge to-night at nine o'clock, by appointment! I suppose you have shown it in the kitchen, and instead of my being able to slip down to the bridge to-night quietly, and see who is there, the whole household will be going in a procession."

"Nobody knows it," Liddy said humbly. "I found it in the basket in Miss Gertrude's dressing room. Look at the back of the sheet." I turned over some of the scraps, and, sure enough, it was a blank deposit slip from the Traders' bank. So Gertrude was going to meet Jack Bailey that night by the bridge! And I had thought he was ill! It hardly seemed like the action of an innocent man—this avoidance of daylight, and of his fiancee's people. I decided to make certain, however, by going to the bridge that night.

After luncheon Mr. Jamieson suggested that I go with him to Richfield, and I consented.

"I am inclined to place more faith in Dr. Stewart's story," he said, "since I found that scrap in old Thomas' pocket. It bears out the statement that the woman with the child, and the woman who quarreled with Armstrong, are the same. It looks as if Thomas had stumbled on to some affair which was more or less discreditable to the dead man, and, with a certain loyalty to the family, had kept it to himself. Then, you see, your story about the woman at the card-room window begins to mean something. It is the nearest approach to anything tangible that we have had yet."

Warner took us to Richfield in the car. It was about 25 miles by railroad, but by taking a series of atrociously rough short cuts we got there very quickly. It was a pretty little town, on the river, and back on the hill I could see the Morton big country house, where Halsey and Gertrude had been staying until the night of the murder.

Elm street was almost the only street, and number 14 was easily found. It was a small white house, dilapidated without having gained anything picturesque, with a low window and a porch only a foot or so above the bit of a lawn. There was a baby-carriage in the path, and from a swing at the side came the sound of conflict. Three small children were disputing vociferously, and a faded young woman with a kindly face was trying to hush the clamor. When she saw us she untied her gingham apron and came around to the porch.

"Good afternoon," I said. Jamieson lifted his hat, without speaking. "I came to inquire about a child named Lucien Wallace."

"I am glad you have come," she said. "In spite of the other children, I think the little fellow is lonely. We thought perhaps his mother would be here to-day."

Mr. Jamieson stepped forward.

"You are Mrs. Tate?" I wondered how the detective knew.

"Yes, sir."

"Mrs. Tate, we want to make some inquiries. Perhaps in the house—'

"Come right in," she said hospitably. And soon we were in the little shabby parlor, exactly like a thousand of its prototypes. Mrs. Tate sat uneasily, her hands folded in her lap.

"How long has Lucien been here?" Mr. Jamieson asked.

"Since a week ago last Friday. His mother paid one week's board in advance, the other has not been paid."

"Was he ill when he came?"

"No, sir, not what you'd call sick. He was getting better of typhoid, she said, and he's picking up fine."

"Will you tell me his mother's name and address?"

"That's the trouble," the young woman said, knitting her brows. "She gave her name as Mrs. Wallace, and said she had no address. She was looking for a boarding house in town. She said she worked in a department store, and couldn't take care of the child properly, and he needed fresh air and milk. I had three children of my own, and one more didn't make much difference in the work, but—I wish she would pay this week's board."

"Did she say what store it was?"

"No, sir, but all the boy's clothes came from King's. He has far too fine clothes for the country."

There was a chorus of shouts and shrill yells from the front door, followed by the loud stamping of children's feet and a throaty "whoa, whoa!" Into the room came a tandem team of two chubby youngsters, a boy and a girl, harnessed with a clothes-line, and driven by a laughing boy of about seven, in tan overalls and brass buttons. The small driver caught my attention at once; he was a beautiful child, and, although he showed traces of recent severe illness, his skin had now the clear transparency of health.

"Whoa, Flinders," he shouted. "You're going to smash the trap."

Mr. Jamieson coaxed him over by holding out a lead pencil, striped blue and yellow.

"Now, then," he said, when the boy had taken the lead pencil and was testing its usefulness on the detective's cuff, "now then, I'll bet you don't know what your name is!"

I Could See the Mortons' Big Country House.

"I do," said the boy. "Lucien Wallace."

"Great! And what's your mother's name?"

"Mother, of course. What's your mother's name?"

And he pointed to me! I am going to stop wearing black; it doubles a woman's age.

"And where did you live before you came here?" The detective was polite enough not to smile.

SAID BY THE YOUNGSTERS

Some Bright Remarks Worth Preserving, That Have Fallen From Childish Lips.

A little girl, after listening to the hymn, "In heaven there stands an ever open door," remarked that there must be two heavens, "'cause grandma'd never had any open door where she is." And a dear little country laddie, visiting a city Sunday school and hearing about the "many mansions" of the better land, later explained that they had been "studying all about 'Paradise Flats.'"

Ecclesiastical modes and matters frequently are puzzling to the little ones. A small Chicago citizen was taken to a fine church, where the music, windows, furnishings, and all accessories were as impressive as the building. The minister, living up to his enviable reputation as an orator, indulged in a brilliant rhetorical flight.

"I know," he declared, "who gilds the sun and silvers the stars and paints the flowers and tints the sky and lends to the rivers their beauty, to the ocean its glory, to the skies their perfect light," and so on through long and effective periods. Finally came the interrogatory climax: "Who is it, my friends, who performs all these wonders? Who is it? Who?"

From the front pew where the baby listener had been all eager attention came a shrill, disappointed pipe:

"You said you knew!"

A FEW THINGS.

GEORGE BAKER

Reggy—Bah Jove, I'd like to chastise those blawsted reporters!

Cyril—Why so?

Reggy—We have been insulted. The other day the firemen rescued us fellows from the burning clubhouse, and now the reporters have the account headed, "A Few Things Saved, but Nothing of Value."

WASTED A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limbs, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there, I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Mrs. Bertha Sachs, 1621 Second Ave., New York, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1909."

"Mrs. Bertha Sachs is my sister-in-law and I know well how she suffered and was cured by Cuticura Remedies after many other treatments failed. Morris Sachs, 321 E. 89th St., New York, N. Y., Secretary of Deutsch-Ostrowoer Unt.-Verein, Kempner Hebrew Benevolent Society, etc."

A Good Job.

Jacob H. Schiff, at a dinner on the yacht Ramona, condemned a concern that had gone up.

"Straight business methods are the only ones," he said. "There is a moral in the receiver story.

"A man, you know, said one day to a little boy:

"'Well, Tommy, what are you going to be when you grow up?'

"'A receiver, sir,' Tommy answered promptly. 'Ever since pa's been a receiver we've had champagne for dinner and two automobiles.'"

A Woman's Hands.

It isn't work that ruins the hands—it is the soap, the common, dangerous yellow rosin soap. It will eat into and rot cloth, so what won't it do to that delicate skin of a woman's hands? "Easy Task Soap" is pure and antiseptic; it has no nasty, disagreeable odor; it does the cleaning for you and you don't have to wear out your skin and your muscles with rubbing. As it costs no more than poor soaps, why should you ruin your hands? Your grocer has it.

A Kansas woman wants a divorce because her husband throws bricks at her. No man has a right to throw anything at his wife but bouquets and hot air.

HER PHYSICIAN APPROVES

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sabattus, Maine.—"You told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills before child-birth, and we are all surprised to see how much good it did. My physician said 'Without doubt it was the Compound that helped you.' I thank you for your kindness in advising me and give you full permission to use my name in your testimonials."—Mrs. H. W. MITCHELL, Box 3, Sabattus, Me.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MEAN INSINUATION.

Miss Lively—Isn't it strange that baseball players are seldom sunstruck?

Mr. Fussy—Not necessarily. Sunstroke is an affection of the brain.

Simple Expedient.

An American student at a German university tells of a professor who was reading aloud in a classroom papers on a celebrated living German novelist, which had been written by the members of the class. After reading one he commented upon its excellence. "You show an exact comprehension of the matter," he said, addressing the student who had written the paper; "tell us what method you used." "Oh," replied the student, "I just wrote to X——, stating what I wanted to know, and that was what he sent back."

Uncalled For.

"I hear the old bridge outside of Plunkville has collapsed."

"Yes, and the town council can't understand it. We had just given that bridge a coat of paint. Why, it looked like new."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

DAME NATURE HINTS

When the Food Is Not Suited.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food. The old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way.

"Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

"There's a Reason."

Winter Hats

HATTERS' plush, velvet and leaves will probably divide the honors of popularity during the coming winter. All furry surfaces are in great demand among those who are making ready for the winter the enticing millinery which never fails to fill our eyes with beauty and our hearts with longing. Milliners are busy in the dog days buying their stocks and by the first of October they will launch out into the business stream prepared to show their patrons the best millinery that has been produced for many a season.

The winter hats are good from the viewpoint of shape, size, material, and workmanship. The colorings are rich and elegant, there is an absence of overtrimming, and in the majority the size is not exaggerated. Ostrich plumes and fancy feathers, Persian draperies and metal tissues play the conspicuous parts in their trimming. The shapes of hatter's plush are large and picturesque, as a rule, and trimmed with masses of ostrich plumes, five being a conservative number for one hat. Fur hats, on the other hand, are turban shape, and by comparison with the average size, to which we have become accustomed, they may be called small. Beavers are medium or large, and trimmed in many ways. The trimming is selected with regard to the age of the wearer, for the beaver hat is no respecter of ages, and is worn by the little miss and the mature matron.

Three examples of this thoroughly practical hat are shown here. A pretty turban shape is finished with a single broad plume and Persian silk fashioned into an ornament and drape. This Persian shows touches of gold. The hat is in tones of blue and green belonging to the peacock colorings.

A lovely tricorn in black and white is trimmed with a plush ornament and a spray of short white and black half plumes mounted three in the cluster. A smart black aigrette garnishes the pompon trimming.

Ahe large shape in a petunia color is designed for a miss, and is therefore simply trimmed with a big bow made of shaded moire ribbon. The lines of the flat shape are almost unbroken.

These hats have much to recommend them. They are durable and comfortable, as well as pretty and fashionable. The fortunate possessor of a last year's beaver will find it easy to remodel, and the hat is a good investment. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

BUTTONS ARE OF ALL KINDS

Wide Selection Possible This Season for Those Fond of This Kind of Ornament.

Pearl buttons lead in favor as trimmings and for practical use in the fall styles. They are in white, black, mother-of-pearl and dyed shades. Most of these buttons are very large, nearly all in 18 and 20 line sizes.

Demiglobe and cup shapes are seen, with false eyes or black-rimmed eyelets. Often the artificial ivory buttons are dyed in two colors, or in black and a color.

Metal buttons, like metal passementeries, are largely Byzantine in effect. Dull brown, antique gold and silver and hammered copper are some of the effects shown, usually in shell pattern.

Glass and enamel buttons show animal figures—polar bears, wolves, dogs, etc.—mounted in silver. These are especially designed for fur coats. A few porcelain buttons are also shown, painted in Egyptian patterns.

Among novelties, pendants, in imitations of jewels, and small black and red glass buttons are offered.

NEW WAIST MODEL.

This charming new model is of blue silk voile. The front and bretelles are of silk embroidery of the same shade, and the corselet is of blue liberty.

The short sleeves are cut in one piece with the body of the waist, and are finished with bands of the embroidery over puffs of white muslin.

CHARM IN PERFECT VOICE

Probably No One Thing Is More Worth Cultivating Than Pure Musical Tone.

Many women overlook the fact that nothing betokens true refinement more unerringly than a pure, earnest, well modulated voice, free from affectation. In fact, it is in the voice that the secret of the charm of many women lies.

Not every person may have the advantage of lessons in elocution, but every person who will may cultivate a pure tone and a pleasant voice.

The first step in learning to talk well is to breathe correctly.

Let your tones be clear and as musical as you can produce them. Did you ever hear a person speak the name of Brown so that it sounded really musical?

Most people pronounce it with the throat almost closed and from the front of the mouth. There must be a resonance in the voice.

Do not waste your breath in speaking, but let your last tone be as distinct as the first.

Listen yourself when you speak and catch the first false note.

Do not speak in monotone, but modulate your voice to give expression, just as you would follow the signs in music.

Pitch your voice to suit the time and place—not so low as to appear secret, nor so high as to seem bold and nervous.

The Vogue of Satin.

"Satin," says a Paris authority, "is used for everything that a woman could carry."

That includes handbags, scarfs, parasols, bands on long gloves, the new reticules in our grandmothers' style, fans, everything—all appear in heavy satin, usually in black or in black and white.

So look carefully to that material for all your dress accessories.

Black and White Eton.

Among the new eton suits sent out by the Paris dressmakers may be noted cream-colored moire suits with square black sailor collars of mousseline de soie, and also black satin suits with white cloth sailor collars, finished with a double row of gilt buttons down the front of the short jacket.

In black and white fabric combinations white silk with a black velvet stripe has been seen.

TICKS ARE DEGENERATE RELATIVES OF SPIDERS

Horrid Little Insects Fasten Themselves on Animals and Human Beings and Suck Blood Until They Are Full.

The horrid little insects known as wood ticks, which fasten themselves upon animals and human beings, and suck the blood until they become nearly four times their normal size, are minute, dangerous relatives of spiders, which have become to a greater or less degree parasitic. They constitute, with the mites, a group (Avarina) represented in great variety in all parts of the world, and everywhere troublesome to man and animals. Host of them are of pin-head size, but some become, when swollen, as large as hazel nuts. The head is small, and almost merged into the neck, but is armed with powerful biting jaws, having backward-pointed teeth, enabling the creature to hang on firmly after burying its head in the skin of any animal with a clutch soft enough to be penetrated. These mites and ticks abound in grass, herbage and on the leaves of bushes, on the under side of which some species make galls. When a large animal comes along they seize upon it, search some place in the skin, soft and moist enough for their purpose, drive in their jaws, and, having secured a firm hold, begin to suck the blood and juices until they can hold no more, and may have swelled from the size of a duck-shot to that of an oval filbert. Stimulated by this gorge, the eggs of the female develop rapidly, are voided and fall to the ground or brushed off on leaves, where they presently hatch, and soon afterwards the parent dies. If let alone, the presence of the tick does not seem to annoy wild animals greatly, although the ticks gather sometimes in solid masses, as Mr. Roosevelt mentions of some of the antelopes he encountered in British East Africa; but if an attempt is made to pull the creature off, after it is well anchored, the chances are that the neck will break before the jaws let go, as you say, and the head will remain in the skin to decay and form a festering wound. Hence, the head should always be picked out with a needle or similar sharp instrument, and that instrument should first be sterilized. The "red spider," which troubles our plants, the English harvest-bug, the minute mites of cheese and of sugar, and the still more minute skin parasite of the itch disease, are members of this same group. There are, however, certain abnormal members of the fly family (Diptera), which infest birds, sheep, and some other animals, and are known as "ticks," which must not be confounded with the true (acarid) ticks, since they are true insects; one of these is the means of carrying the southern cattle disease called Texas fever from one ainmal and herd to another. When a person finds he has ticks upon him, he should at once cover them with thick oil and grease, beneath which they will soon die and fall, or can be removed without breaking off and leaving the head. The same is true of animals.

Wood Ticks.

1. Rhinoceros Mite. 2. Hippopotamus Mite. 3. British Harvest Bug. 4. Beautiful Tick (European).

There is hardly any animal which is free from their attacks, and the accompanying illustrations show two kinds which afflict the rhinoceros and hippopotamus, as well as some creatures nearer home. It is in search of them principally that the starlings and other birds search the hides of these and other large animals when resting, and get the name of "tick birds."

VACCINES FOR FARM ANIMALS

Treatment of Many Conditions in Horses, as Well as Cattle and Dogs, Has Given Great Relief.

(By B. F. KAUPP, Colorado Agricultural College.)

It has been only a few months since bacterial vaccine has been used on the lower animals. The treatment of many conditions in horses, as well as cattle and dogs by bacterial vaccines made from the germs that produce the disease, has given great relief.

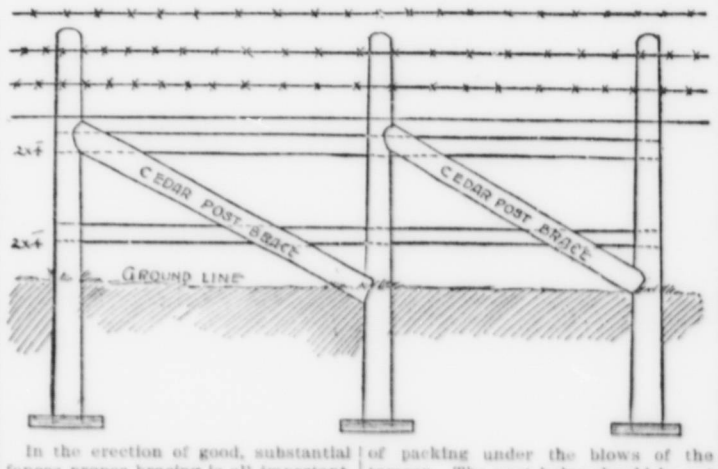
It was announced from the laboratory of pathology of the Colorado Agricultural college a few months ago that the preparation of a vaccine from the germs that cause the suppuration in fistula and poll evil had given great success in experimental trials in our hospital practice. It is also found that not only will this vaccine effect a cure in over 95 per cent. of the cases of fistula and poll evil when used by competent men, but it is useful in pus formations following nail pricks, wire cuts, or injuries of other kinds. Quittors yield to its effects.

The chemical substance contained within these germs stimulates the cells of the body (when introduced into it) to build up or form a substance that makes it impossible for the germ to live in its presence. The pus becomes less, thicker, wound finally dry, and healing goes on uninterruptedly.

Likewise, a vaccine made from the germs that cause distemper in horses effects a cure in a very few days, and, if given at the initial stage of the disease, without pus formation.

These vaccines are hypodermically given at stated intervals. The body will make its own repairs if only the right stimulus is applied.

CORNER POST WELL BRACED



In the erection of good, substantial fences proper bracing is all important, and the method of bracing here shown will keep post from moving, even when the wires were stretched by the use of a wagon wheel turned as a capstan, and drawn so taut that every wire will ring when struck like the string of a violin.

It is well to anchor the three posts shown on the diagram by spiking a 2x6 as shown in the cut, one on the face and one on the back of the post, and placing a piece of plank or stone across, and then packing the earth solidly around the post. The post hole should not be cut sloping, but as straight as possible, resembling a mortise as cut by a carpenter. If the post hole is cut sloping it is impossible to tamp the earth solidly around the posts, as the earth will spread instead of packing under the blows of the tamper. The post holes should be cut as near the size of the post as possible, allowing sufficient space for tamping at the back, and not more than an inch at each side, where a thin tamper can be used. The face of the post hole should be dug straight and plumb, and the posts set firmly against it, all the tamping being done at the back and at the sides of the post.

The seven foot posts are to be used, and the lower wire is 16 inches from the surface of the ground, the next wire nine inches above, and the other two wires nine and one-half apart, respectively. This will make the fence forty-four inches high, which is ample, for live stock as a rule will not undertake to leap over a barbed wire fence.

TENER MANFULLY MEETS ACCUSERS

Republican Nominee Fully Answers Bitter Political Attack.

GIVES DETAILED STATEMENT

Ready to ' em All Stock at Price Paid From Any Purchaser Who Invested Because of His Connection.

John K. Tener, Republican nominee for governor, in a frank and manly statement, has met the attacks of his political opponents and given a complete answer to every insinuation that has been made in the journalistic assault upon his character.

He has demonstrated that his connections with the companies in question have been straightforward and honorable in every way. He has told of his exact relations with the Utilities enterprise, which he believed when he became identified with it it was a feasible project, and he holds that is still a fact, and he has proclaimed that he is ready to pay in full any amounts that may have been paid into the company for stock, purchased because of his connection with the corporation.

The attempt to discredit Mr. Tener because of his relations with an insurance company that has also been made an issue in the state campaign was upon the face of it so palpably a political trick that no one took it seriously.

Mr. Tener points out that this company has been a success from the start, and that he is still interested in it financially.

Mr. Tener brands the attacks upon him as unwarranted and malicious, and in view of the rumors that have been put in circulation by a coterie of politicians, to the effect that he is to be arrested, Mr. Tener boldly defies them to carry out their plot.

W. L. Chrisman, who is now president of the National Public Utilities company, when shown Mr. Tener's statement, said: "It fully covers the situation."

Mr. Tener's statement reads as follows:

Statement of Fact.

"Ordinarily I would pay no attention to the falsehoods that have been uttered by an untruthful newspaper, but it may be that some fair-minded men have been misled by the way facts have been distorted, and for this reason, and for this reason alone, I desire to make a short statement which covers my position.

"In December of last year I was visited in Washington by William L. Chrisman, Esq., an attorney of Philadelphia, and F. L. Smart, who requested me to become president of the National Public Utilities Corporation. I had favorably known Mr. Smart for sometime, but not knowing Mr. Chrisman made inquiry and learned that he was a lawyer of excellent reputation and with good business connections. I also learned that other reputable men, General Russell Thayer, Colonel William Bender Wilson, Joseph S. Mack, Frederick S. Ashoff, William B. Margerum and Simeon Merrill, were directors.

"I was also informed that the company had been incorporated according to law, was properly organized and could legitimately carry on the business for which it was intended, which was the building of a railroad from Astoria to a point beyond Seaside in the state of Oregon. I also made inquiry of those believed to be familiar with the locality as to the practicability of the enterprise. After this I concluded to accept the presidency and served in that office, and as director, during the first quarter of this year, but as my labors in congress were daily increasing, because of important legislation then pending, which required practically all of my time, I resigned from the company. For some reason or other my resignation was not accepted at the time I tendered it, but I received no salary as president except for the months of January and February, although entitled to the salary for March.

$50,000 par value of the stock was sent to me and I immediately returned it with a letter stating that I would not accept it as I had not earned it and was not entitled to it. A little later $20,000, par value, of the stock was sent to me, which I also returned for the same reason.

A Feasible Project.

"I believed the object of this company to be legitimate and notwithstanding the vicious attacks which have been made against it I am not convinced to the contrary, and today am of the opinion that it could be successfully carried out. Charles N. Bennett, a civil engineer of high repute in his profession, whom I sent to Oregon on my election to the presidency, reported favorably upon it and within a week passed has reiterated that opinion, and has stated that if eastern capital could not be had to carry the work through local capital there could be had to do it. I believe that the worst blow the stockholders of this company have received is the result of unwarranted and malicious attacks through the columns of this hypocritical newspaper.

"I never promoted the National Public Utilities Corporation; was not a participant in its promotion; never sold any of its stock, or solicited any body to buy any of its stock. My connection with it was entirely honorable and straightforward, as I have above described.

"I am informed that about $39,000 in cash (not nearly $2,,000,000 as published) have been paid to the company for stock, and to show that I do not wish to evade any responsibility in the matter, if any man, relying upon my being president, or upon my name being used in connection with this company during the time I was president, presents proof to me that he purchased any of the stock and paid cash to the company I will take the stock from him and give him exactly what he paid for it in cash.

"Whatever has been done by this company as respects the taking over of any other or subsidiary companies or enterprises, was before my connection with it, and with which I had nothing to do, but I believe, and had the right to believe, from the character of those who were in control, and from my investigation, that all had been properly and legally done.

"As to Messrs. Bromley and Haines I never heard of them until I became connected with the company and not until the matter was exploited by yellow journalism did I ever hear any adverse criticism affecting them.

A Successful Company.

"Concerning my connection with the Security Life and Annuity company with others I sold my stock some years ago and soon after, at the request of the company's president, Mr. W. O. Johnson, of Chicago, I again became a member of its board of directors and still serve in that capacity. The company is and always has been eminently successful.

"In view of the scurrilous attacks I believe it to be no more than just to myself, as an assurance to the people of my business integrity and ability, to say that I am now and have been for twelve years president of the First National Bank of Charleroi, Pennsylvania; I am now and for several years have been secretary and treasurer of the Charleroi Savings and Trust company, and I have several other business connections—all prosperous—all well managed, and all have the confidence of every one connected or having to do with them.

"I know that certain interests are striving to induce some one to be the 'tool' to issue (for political effect) a warrant for my arrest. For the proper condemnation of such conduct I confidently appeal to the sense of fair play of the electors of Pennsylvania and challenge my detractors to proceed. I court any judicial investigation, for I am ready to meet any and all accusers in a court of justice instead of trying to answer hidden foes who are straining every point to accomplish, for political purposes, my business and political ruin."

TENER PRAISED BY FORMER RIVAL

Lieutenant Governor Murphy Lauds Republican Nominee.

AND PREDICTS HIS ELECTION

Eloquent Son of Cambria Tells Why Pennsylvania Should Go Republican This Year.

One of the most noteworthy speeches of this campaign was made a few nights ago by Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Murphy, who, although he was the only avowed candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, which ultimately went to Congressman John K. Tener, is now one of the most ardent advocates of Mr. Tener's election.

Governor Murphy, who is an eloquent and forcible campaigner, presented a comprehensive review of the great achievements of the Stuart administration, the progress made in the development of all of the departments and the rigorous prosecution of the capitol frauds in both criminal and civil actions, and dwelt upon the fact that Mr. Tener is pledged to continue the policies of Edwin S. Stuart.

Governor Murphy, among other things, said:

"With every department of the state government in the hands of intelligent and patriotic servants, with the most modern and systematic methods of business in force, and with a record luminous with order, economy and faithful service, the question before the people at the coming election is whether or not they can afford to repudiate the achievements of Governor Stuart and the works of his administration and support either of the Democratic candidates. And, remember, whatever has been accomplished is distinctly a Republican party asset and one which we cheerfully submit in justification of the vote of confidence which we ask.

"In the present juncture of affairs it must be admitted that the election of the Hon. Webster Grim, although a man of character and excellent reputation in private and public life, is absolutely impossible this year. Nor is the outlook any more favorable for the other Democratic candidate, the Hon. William H. Berry. Both of these gentlemen, without hesitation, attack everything that is Republican and they stand for a reversal of measures and of administration which are the chief pride and glory of the Republican party. They seek, of course, not to only aid themselves but all other Democrats, especially candidates for congress, which can only be construed as an open attack upon the protective principle which is the breath of life in the nostrils of Pennsylvania, and by which she has advanced to the highest degree of material development. In addition to their indorsement and support of congressional candidates, they are also supporting Democratic candidates for the legislature in the hope of electing a Democratic United States senator.

"Against this well-defined purpose Pennsylvania stands committed, for she believes in the protective principle and in placing those in congress who are sincerely its friends. Any other course would be suicidal, for we cannot, in the interest of manifold industries and of the man who toils, afford to support in the present political crisis the candidates of the Democracy who advocate free trade or favor such a confusing and unsatisfactory schedule as found expression in the Wilson-Gorman bill of the Cleveland administration, which proved so fatal in its consequences to the labor and capital of the country.

Berry as a Bryanite.

"We must recognize in Mr. Berry the only conspicuous representative of Mr. Bryan and his policies now before the people of this state. To every policy advocated by the Nebraskan he has given loyal allegiance. But Mr. Bryan has practically ceased to be a figure of national importance, and this is due to the fact that all of his so-called policies have been defeated and repudiated by the American people.

"As Mr. Bryan has been repudiated, so do I believe Pennsylvania will refuse to give his lieutenant, Mr. Berry, the support he asks. His speeches upon the stump create sincere doubt as to his soundness and safety, and the belief arises that he is not fitted, either by temperament or judgment, to preside over the destinies of this great commonwealth. There is an absence of self-poise, of self-control in his speech, and of good temper, which are essential to the great responsibilities of a chief magistrate.

"Wide latitude is permitted in the arena of political discussion, but surely Mr. Berry has passed the danger limit, and, as a result, we find the air filled with confusing explanations of his business relations with a leading Democratic politician, none of which seem to be borne out by the facts, and this is followed by an intemperate denunciation of the public press without exception. He not only condemns it as destitute of patriotism and virtue, but proceeds to pass judgment upon all the newspaper men of the state, and without mercy joyfully consigns them to be burned at the stake.

"Such a cruel and barbarous punishment is prohibited by the constitution, but this does not seem to matter to Mr. Berry—apparently he would like to be present at the hoped-for event and play the part of chief torch-bearer at the ceremonies.

"These things which an attentive public has learned, together with the astonishing statement that, because of his discovery of the capitol frauds, he was compelled to have a bodyguard in constant attendance about his person in order to prevent his assassination—something which has hitherto been unknown to any one, with perhaps the exception of Mr. Berry—strongly indicate that one of such excitable temperament and susceptible to such beliefs, practices and delusions is not the kind of a man that this state is entitled to have for governor.

"Conditions within the state are eminently satisfactory.

Strong Words For Tener.

"What we need in the high office of governor and the other offices to be filled in this election is calmness, not impulsiveness, a judgment of men and affairs that is broadened and ripened by experience—a just conception of the powers of government, a keen and sympathetic appreciation of the rights of the citizen, and a comprehensive idea of the manifold interests and elements that enter into the complex life of this great commonwealth. Above all, we need a man safe and sure, and the Republican party has risen equal to the demand.

"We have named as the candidate for governor a man with a true heart, with a sound brain in a sound body, who has toiled in the workshop and in the mills and is in strong and lasting sympathy with labor; who step by step moved forward and identified himself with the business enterprises of his section, where he has attained a position which commands the undivided respect of those who love honesty and believe in genuine manhood; who has represented his district in the congress of the United States ably and faithfully; whose reputation for integrity is of the highest, and whose Republicanism has always been of the right kind; who is in accord and sympathy with the policies of the Stuart administration, and who has promised the people that when governor he will esteem it a privilege and duty to conduct the state government in accordance with those policies. No man who knows him will doubt his word or will believe that his promise will remain unredeemed. I have the honor to know him personally, and I appreciate him as a man of high ideals—pure in thought and speech and unchallenged in public or private life. The election of the Hon. John K. Tener is assured."

Camels That Ride.

The Bedouins decorate their baggage camels in the most fantastic manner. A huge pack saddle is surmounted by a still larger pannier. Above this again is a sort of chair in which the rider sits. The long strips of leather hanging down the sides are simply for decorative purposes. I have seen camels when too young to go on long treks being carried in these panniers, and they are always used for the Bedouin children.

This tribe has many quaint and curious customs. Perhaps the most curious of these is the manner in which they show their esteem for certain strangers. One evening when a young camel had been killed for the meal I noticed the women collecting the blood in a bowl. Then, to my astonishment, they started painting my camels on the necks and flanks with the blood. Unknowingly I was the recipient of the greatest honor that can be paid a stranger. The blood dried on and remained for a long time, acting as a talisman among all the Sherarat tribe.—Douglas Carruthers in Wide World Magazine.

A Tragedy of Instinct.

The processionaries are rather strange caterpillars. A single string of them five or six yards long has just climbed down from my parasol pines and is at this moment infolding itself in the walls of my garden, carpeting the ground traversed with transparent silk, according to the custom of the race. To say nothing of the meteorological apparatus of unparalleled delicacy which they carry on their spine, these caterpillars, as everybody knows, have this remarkable quality—that they travel only in a troop, one after the other, like the blind of Breughel or those in the parable, each of them obstinately, indissolubly following her leader; so much so that our author having one morning disposed the file on the edge of a large stone vase, thus closing the circuit, for seven whole days, during an atrocious week, through cold, hunger and unspeakable weariness, the unhappy troop on its tragic round without rest, respite or mercy, pursued the pitiless circle until death arrived.—Forum.

Called For Glory Divine.

Among the customers in a drug store one day last week was a little girl who is known to her playmates in that vicinity as "Peggy." As she stood waiting for her turn it could be noticed that she was repeating something under her breath in her effort to remember what her mother had sent her to buy.

"Mother wants five cents' worth of glory divine."

"Of what?" said the young clerk, who was standing there as if stunned by a hard blow of a baseball bat.

"Glory divine, glory divine," came the reply in a louder voice than when she had made the original request.

"You had better go home and have your mother write it down on paper, little girl," said the clerk, feeling that the girl was too sure to argue with him.

Soon she returned, and, handing the note to the clerk, he read, "Five cents' worth of chlorate of lime."—Philadelphia Times.

A Bit of Sicily.

"There is no Italian town more picturesque than the Sicilian capital, Palermo," writes a traveler. "In its port lie crowded the queerest coasting craft I have ever set eyes on. Sailing ships of all rigs, their hulls painted all the colors of the rainbow, nose up against the quay, where mule carts, whose drivers are shouting at the top of their voices, wait to take away the merchandise. The narrow street where the custom house officers examine the goods brought ashore is a place of terrific noise. When a driver, two clerks and two custom house officers are discussing the contents of a bale or a cask it seems as though murder must be committed within the next few seconds. But somebody signs something, the cart moves on, and everybody laughs."

Murdering Shakespeare.

"I never hesitate to cut and slash and change any play until it suits me," said Stuart Robson to his legal adviser on one occasion.

"I suppose you edit Shakespeare with a blue pencil?" replied the lawyer.

"You can just bet I do."

"Then, I imagine, you would plead guilty to an indictment for murdering the Bard of Avon?"

"No; I would not, but I would admit dissecting his corpse."

Needs Prodding.

"It is a great mistake, Mabel, to trifle with the affections of a man who loves you by encouraging some one else."

"Well, he's a little slow, auntie. I think he needs a pacemaker."

Kindness.

Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the same dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love; make haste to be kind!—Amiel.

Smoking That Maddens.

Marihuana is a weed used by people of the lower class and sometimes by soldiers, but those who make larger use of it are prisoners sentenced to long terms. The use of the weed and its sale, especially in barracks and prisons, are very severely punished; yet it has many adepts, and Indian women cultivate it because they sell it at rather high prices. The dry leaves of marihuana alone or mixed with tobacco make the smoker wilder than a wild beast. It is said that immediately after the first three or four drafts of smoke smokers begin to feel a slight headache; then they see everything moving, and finally they lose all control of their mental faculties. Everything, the smokers say, takes the shape of a monster, and men look like devils. They begin to fight, and, of course, everything smashed is a monster "killed." But there are imaginary beings whom the wild man cannot kill, and these inspire fear until the man is panic stricken and runs.—Mexican Herald.

The Curse of Cowdray.

Cowdray, once the estate of the earls of Egmont and now in the possession of Lord Cowdray, better known as Sir Weetman Pearson, is the subject of a very interesting superstition. Shortly after the dissolution of the monasteries Cowdray was conferred upon Sir Anthony Browne, the father of the first Lord Montague, who had already been given Battle Abbey as a reward for his services to Henry VIII. The story goes that Sir Anthony, who had destroyed the church and the cloisters in Battle Abbey, was visited in the great hall as he was holding his first feast by one of the dispossessed monks, who after solemnly cursing him, prophesied that his family should perish by fire and water. Two centuries and a half later the prophecy was tragically fulfilled. In 1793 the house was destroyed by fire and within a week of that disaster the last Lord Montague lost his life in Germany in an unsuccessful attempt to shoot the falls of the Rhine.—London News.

Belts by the Pound.

A western senator of ample physical proportions was endeavoring to obtain a belt at a Washington haberdashery. He was having a difficult time in selecting a belt whose design struck his fancy as well as of proper requirements for his girth.

"How much is that one?" he demanded of the clerk, who was entirely unaware of the distinguished character of the patron.

"That is $4," said the salesman.

"Four dollars!" exclaimed the senator. "Isn't that an awful price for a belt?"

"Yes, sir," admitted the man behind the counter; "but, you see, sir, after they get into the regular surcingle size we charge for 'em by the pound."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Very Brief.

A record of brevity in a holiday correspondence was established by a Frenchman in the eighteenth century. Voltaire and Piton, the epigrammatist, exchanged challenges to write the shortest possible letter. So, when Voltaire was starting on a journey, he wrote to Piton, "Eo rus," which is the complete Latin for "I am going to the country." Piton's answer was just "I"—complete Latin for "Go!"

In business correspondence the record is divided between Victor Hugo, who, anxious to know how his "Les Miserables" was going, wrote to the publisher, "?" and the publisher, who triumphantly replied, "!"

A Servile House of Lords.

When King Henry VIII.'s name was spoken in his presence in the house of lords every peer prostrated himself with Asiatic servility. An entry in the records of the house gives the substance of a speech delivered by the chancellor on Jan. 16, 1541, in which the king's goodness and wisdom are extolled, and it tells us that whenever his majesty was mentioned, "which happened often," all the lords prostrated themselves, bowing to the ground as one man.

The Important Personage.

"Are you the owner of this place?" asked the book agent.

"I am," replied Farmer Corntassel. "Anything I can do for you?"

"No. The chances are that you are too hard worked to have time to read anything and that you haven't any spare change anyhow. Let me talk to the hired man."—Washington Star.

Poor Simile.

"I never saw any one so timid as Henpeck is," remarked Wigger. "Why, he's like a mouse in his own house."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Wagger. "His wife isn't the least bit afraid of him."

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

Number Four.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 1. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

Mr. Franklin at the Bar.

Among the state papers for the year 1536 may be read a letter from John Bartelet to Henry VIII.'s minister, Thomas Cromwell, stating that in accordance with the recent act the mayor and aldermen had chosen Mr. Pryseley to attend the English parliament as the representative of Calais and that he had made certain arrangements about his passage into England.

One Thomas Boyd was elected as his colleague, and Calais continued to send M. P.'s to Westminster until, in the reign of Mary, we lost the stronghold we had held for over two centuries. This is the only instance in England's history of anything like colonial representation at Westminster unless indeed we reckon one or two exceptional occasions when colonial grievances have been voiced at the bar of the house of commons, as they were so brilliantly by Benjamin Franklin, when Burke said the scene reminded him of "a master examined by a parcel of schoolboys."—London News.

Learn to Laugh.

Laughter is the best of all tonics. Bacilli are humorless folk and hate the physical constitution that is always vibrating with the shocks of fun. This is a truism, but serviceable and likewise worth repeating are the platitudes on laughter as the great aseptic of the soul. It is true there are different kinds of laughter, and some of them need formaldehyde. There is a kind, too, that needs bicarbonate of soda as an antidote—another that calls for lithia tablets. But the right sort of laughter was stolen from the gods by some wiser Prometheus, and nothing can prevail against it. In America there is plenty of laughter, good, bad and indifferent, but mostly good, and much that is very good. It is one of our greatest national resources. May we conserve it always. A people that laugh kindly and often have not much to fear; a people that laugh wisely, nothing.—Chicago Tribune.

Fanny Dickens.

Fanny, the sister of Charles Dickens, was one of the first students entered at the old Royal Academy of Music when it opened its doors at Tenterden street in 1823, and at that time the students lived at the academy, only going home for the week end. "Every Sunday," Dickens told Forster, "I was at the academy at 9 o'clock in the morning to fetch her (Fanny), and we walked back there together at night." And the Sunday itself the two spent—in the Marshalsea prison, where their father and mother then resided, owing to Mr. Dickens having "failed to propitiate his creditors." While her father was still in prison Fanny won a prize at the academy, and the future novelist, then engaged in pasting labels on blacking pots at 7 shillings a week, was present to see her receive it.—Westminster Gazette.

Twain and the Rivermen.

Mark Twain once told to a party of friends the following story on himself:

On one occasion when he started on a trip down the Mississippi river on a flatboat he was advised never to answer the questions asked by rivermen on other boats and never to bandy words with them, as he would be sure always to come out second best. He followed the advice religiously for a time, but one day he thought he saw a chance to get the better of a riverman who called out:

"Hey, thar, what yer loaded with?"

"Jackasses. Don't you want to come aboard?" yelled back Twain.

"That's whut I reckoned seein' as how they let ther biggest donkey hev ther run of the deck!" came back. Twain made a dive below as all the rivermen in the neighborhood set up a derisive laugh at his expense.

"Niggering" Logs.

The question was asked me as a native of Maine if I could find out what "niggering" logs meant in the statement "We niggered the logs." I found that to "nigger" logs was to save the labor of chopping them into lengths by piling them up crossed at points where it was desired to separate them. By building fires under these crossings several logs could be burned into sections at once. Because "a nigger" was supposed to be lazy this lazy man's way of cutting logs into lengths was, naturally enough, called "niggering."—Appleton Morgan in New Shakespeareana.

Mr. Walter Seymour, who writes "Ups and Downs of a Wandering Life," had Thorold Rogers for a tutor while at Oxford. Rogers was as amusing as he was heterodox. PUT BERRY UNDER THE SEARCHLIGHT

Democrats and Prohibitionists Charge Him With Hypocrisy.

HIS VERACITY IS QUESTIONED

And His Administration as State Treasurer is Made the Subject of a Sharp Attack.

Without the Republicans being called upon to fire a shot, William H. Berry, the Keystone Party nominee for governor, has been fairly riddled by the oratorical batteries of the Prohibitionists and the faction of the Democracy which he deserted when he was defeated in the Allentown convention.

From every side, Berry's reputation for veracity has been attacked. He is accused of falsehood, of breaking his solemn promises and of hypocrisy of the rankest kind.

Not only is his word questioned, but serious allegations regarding his conduct while holding the office of state treasurer are being boldly made by some of the most prominent leaders in the Democratic party.

Hot Democratic Declaration.

Berry's refusal to withdraw from the field, after Grim, the Democratic nominee for governor, had expressed a willingness to comply with the request of prominent Democrats and independents, that both Berry and Grim retire to permit of fusion on former Mayor Guthrie, of Pittsburg, called forth further bitter denunciations of the Keystone candidate, who was accused of selfishness and being lacking in patriotism.

In an address to the voters of Pennsylvania the Democratic state executive committee has denounced Berry as insincere. Berry's refusal to comply with the request of the representative citizens who asked him to retire to permit of fusion, they say "is convincing evidence of the fact that his only object is to defeat Mr. Grim and not Mr. Tener."

The address refers to Mr. Berry as "one whose record in financial transactions is, to say the least, not above suspicion," and asks whether the people shall expect good government from Senator Grim or from "one who has been accused in the public press of depositing public funds whilst in an important official position to financial institutions for the promotion of his own enterprises?"

At a mass meeting held in Philadelphia last week, W. K. Meyers, of Harrisburg, in a speech declared that when Berry was elected treasurer a number of prominent Democrats went to him and offered to go on his bond, but he declined the proffer and accepted the services of the president of a Harrisburg trust company. This is the company through which Berry, while he was state treasure, floated a big loan for the Berry brick yard, and it has been a subject of comment that while Berry was state treasurer the state deposits in this trust company were increased enormously.

Prohibition Nominee on Berry.

In a speech delivered a few nights ago, Madison F. Larkin, Prohibition nominee for governer, paid his respects to Mr. Berry.

"The Keystone Party," said Mr. Larkin, "with W. H. Berry at its head, is nothing more than a let of disgruntled office-seekers kicked out of other parties. It is nominations and offices they want. They don't want reform! Berry is for temperance today, whisky tomorrow and local option the next day. The Keystone Party people don't know what they want;"

"Votes for Berry will come from where his is not known," he declared. "His neighbors will not support him because they say he is too tricky. Berry has had his arms up for years, like lightning rods waiting to be struck by all the party conventions in the state. He comes now with his boss-ridden Keystone Party claiming it is an anti-liquor party, which is only a big bluff. He is not sincere. He has no high principles for the good of the whole people, but he aims to satisfy a personal ambition and to satisfy a grudge against his political enemies.

"Berry got the nomination of the Prohibition party before, but he deserted at the most critical moment and went over to support a whisky candidate and he stumped the state for him just before election. Then he was disgruntled because the Prohibitionists did not honor him with the nomination this year."

Berry's Democratic Allies.

Mr. Berry is a Democrat, but he has no party standing. He does not come as a candidate of a party. He is self-appointed, or, to be more precise, he is the appointee of a handful of self-appointed delegates who gathered together to carry out the Berry wishes and the Berry ambitions.

On the Berry ticket is a host of Democratic candidates for congress and the legislature. These candidates are not there by the virtue of primary elections, but by the grace of the Berry state committee, which assumes to itself the voice of the people.

The Berry pretensions are those of a mere self-seeker. But, then, Berry needs the emoluments of office, for how else is he to make good to the wicked Colonel Guffey, Democratic "boss," the sums of money borrowed from him?

Speaking of the Divorce Evil

Trying to succeed in business without advertising is like the case of the man who, trying to cut expenses, divorced his wife and alone attempted to keep house and raise his children. It cost him more money for doctor bills and funeral expenses in a year than he gave his wife in a lifetime.

When advertising is divorced, business success becomes failure.

This paper is building your neighbor's business. He has reasons. He tried advertising and it helped him. It is not an experiment — this paper brings results. Good, hard, convincing results — dollars.

TRADE MORAL—Joan of Arc was the only woman on earth able to resist a bargain advertisement—and she's dead. If you've got a bargain in something, advertise it to the women folks in this paper.
